

Six Start Moon Test This July

Scientists Have Rigid Physicals

By ROBERT HEARD
HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Six young scientists picked to land on the moon in the Apollo program begin their preparations next month.

But first they will appear at a news conference at Houston's Manned Spacecraft Center Tuesday.

Two of the six, who are trained pilots, will start astronaut training here at the space center. The other four go to Williams Air Force Base, Ariz., for a year of flight training.

For the most part the six were tight-lipped about their selection awaiting the news conference. Their names became known Saturday through a copyright story in the Houston Chronicle. Their selection later was confirmed officially. However, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announcement will be made at the news conference.

Tell of Physicals
One of the two trained pilots, Dr. Frank C. Michel of Rice University, commented on the physical examinations they underwent.

"It was a different experience, all right," he said Sunday. "It took over a week and they just tested everything five different ways."

Approximately 25 candidates reportedly took the rigid tests at Brooks Air Force Base, San Antonio.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials would not confirm the number of finalists. Previously they said they had received 1,500 applications or expressions of interest by the end of last year.

One of the six selected, Dr. Duane E. Graveline, who is scheduled to resign today his post in the Aerospace Medical Division at Brooks Air Force Base, said in San Antonio Sunday the moon is like an "unclimbed mountain."

Has Done Research
"It's there," he said. "Somebody's going to climb it."

Graveline has done research on weightlessness.

Michel, 31, said he also had looked forward to getting into the program. He has always been interested in space, and read such science fiction as Buck Rogers and Flash Gordon "just like all the other kids."

Current plans do not call for a scientist on the first flight of the three-man Apollo, which is at least four years away.

A physicist, Michel is known for his research on solar winds. He was born in La Crosse, Wis., and lives in Houston with his wife and son.

Graveline, 34, is a native of Newport, Vt. He is married and has four children.

The other four are:
Dr. Owen K. Garriott, 34, an electronics engineer and associate professor at Stanford University. Born in Enid, Okla., married and the father of three sons.

Dr. Edward G. Gibson, 28, a physicist with a Ford Motor Co. subsidiary in Newport Beach, Calif. born in Buffalo, N.Y., married and has four children.

Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin, 33, a Navy flight surgeon stationed at Jacksonville, Fla. He is the other one with test experience. Born in Oak Park, Ill., married and has a daughter.

Dr. Harrison Schmitt, 29, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Flagstaff, Ariz. Born in Santa Rita, N.M., bachelor.

Beatrix Engaged To German Vet; Dutch Are Uneasy

SOESTDYK PALACE, The Netherlands (AP)—Queen Juliana announced the engagement of her eldest daughter to a West German war veteran today and said she was "very conscious about the doubts and even the resistance" many Dutch may feel toward the match.

But the queen said she expected her future son-in-law, Claus von Amsberg, 38, a West German diplomat, "by his personality will be of great support" to her daughter, Crown Princess Beatrix, 27.

Von Amsberg's wartime background had stirred up opposition by many Dutch.

Beatrix told a news conference preceding the announcement that she understood resistance to her choice still existed and that it would take some time to end it.

She said she was very happy. The queen said "Claus, like his family, has been opposed absolutely to the Nazi regime."

Arraignment Due In Walsh Assault Case on July 6

An adjourned session of County Court will be held Monday, July 6 at which time criminal matters will be continued before County Judge Raymond J. Mino.

The term, originally scheduled for June, was postponed until July when County Judge Mino was assigned to the Supreme Court bench to hold Part I of the two part June term of Supreme Court.

Eighteen indictments returned by the April grand jury will come before Judge Mino when the defendants will be arraigned. Other criminal matters adjourned over to July also will be heard.

One of the arraignments will be Robert Born, alias Sergio A. Volov, 18, of 1366 East Third Street, Brooklyn, who is now at large under $2500 bail. He is charged with second and third degree assault, arising out of the alleged attack on Barry Walsh, 23, on Meade Mountain Road last June 1. Walsh alleges he was taken to a vacant house on Meade Mountain Road and tortured. Charles Saccoman appears for Born.

Probe Continues
Since the Walsh incident, there has been a continued investigation in the Woodstock area into the alleged sale and use of marijuana and narcotics.

Following the June 1 incident, Walsh reported there was wide use of narcotics in the area and two raids have been conducted by sheriff's deputies, troopers and narcotic agents.

It is believed the alleged Walsh torture incident may have been triggered by a belief that he was about to talk about the use and sale of narcotics in the area and the "sadistic" attack on him was used to frighten him.

DPW Will Take Over Park Work

Mayor Says Move To Help Programs

Mayor John J. Schwenk said today that he would recommend that the city's parks maintenance be transferred from the Recreation Department to the Board of Public Works.

"I believe," Mayor Schwenk said, "that this shifting of responsibility will result in better park maintenance and will give the Recreation Department more time to devote to the development and supervision of programs of recreation for our children and young people."

The action by the mayor—who was in New York City today to attend a meeting with the House and Home Financing Agency concerning the city's Urban Renewal projects—came on the heels of his veto of a common Council resolution which called for the creation of a parks and recreation committee.

The Council resolution followed numerous complaints by city residents on the condition of the city parks and recreation areas.

Not Answer: Murphy
Andrew J. Murphy III, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Parks, who has been mentioned as possible candidate for mayor on the Republican ticket, told The Freeman that the mayor's action would leave his department with supervisory duties only. However, he said, "Relieving our department of maintenance responsibilities is not the answer to the problem."

He said that there was presently a need for four large parks and other small areas for playground activity.

Murphy said that transfer of the maintenance duties would place five full-time and six part-time employees now in the Recreation Department in the Board of Public Works and would leave all other supervisory work to his department. He said that transfer of the responsibilities was done in a previous administration.

Only 89 Days
"However, once these organizations become a reality we certainly will attempt to fully utilize the assistance they may render to the Republican cause."

Bliss noted he has had only 89 days in which to reorganize the party lineup since succeeding to the chairmanship.

Mayor's Letter
Mayor Schwenk's letter to the Common Council, which was sent under today's date:

Gentlemen:

"On June 8th, 1965, your honorable body adopted a resolution, the purpose of which was to create an advisory committee on parks and recreation."

"The creation of such a city agency requires an amendment to the City Charter, and the City Charter can be amended only by the passage of a local law and not by the adoption of a resolution. I therefore found it necessary to veto the aforesaid resolution."

State Fatals Hit 20; Two Die in Area

A fatal one-car crash in Greene County and a drowning at Sylvan Lake in the Town of East Fishkill, Dutchess County, were added to the list of 20 accidental deaths recorded throughout the state over the weekend.

An Associated Press report today stated that there were six drownings in addition to a total of 14 traffic fatalities.

State Police at Leeds today continued investigation of a fatal accident which occurred at 6:30 a. m. Sunday on Route 23A in Lexington, Greene County, in an endeavor to determine who was operating the vehicle when it crashed into a utility pole and a tree.

Sergeant Joseph Cross said Thomas Gallik, Jr., 23, of Clifton, N. J., was pronounced dead at the scene. Death was due to a skull fracture and other injuries.

Jacques Bogue, age not listed, of Lexington, was taken to Greene County Memorial Hospital and later transferred to a veterans hospital. Troopers said they were unable to question him because of his condition.

Headed South
The car was traveling south on the highway when it failed to negotiate a right curve. The vehicle careened off the pavement and hit the pole and tree. Both men were ejected.

Coroner John Aston of Hunter is withholding a verdict pending further investigation. BCI Investigator M. P. Matera and Troopers P. H. Maddigan and R. L. Bourguignon are investigating.

Bogue, who is in the military service, was transferred from the hospital at Catskill to the Veterans Administration Hospital, Albany.

A 20-year-old Beacon girl accidentally drowned Sunday afternoon, while swimming with friends at Sylvan Lake, Town of East Fishkill.

Sheriff's Sergeant John Dakin of Dutchess County identified the girl as Haydee Gonzalez, of 5 Churchhill Street, Beacon. She was swimming with her mother, Rosario Gonzalez, and her fiancé, Michael Sanchez, 20, also of Beacon, when she suddenly disappeared below the surface about 25 feet off the beach.

Respiration Fails
Lifeguards and John Coughlin, 27, of Fishkill, assisted by other bathers searched for the body, which was recovered by Coughlin. A Vassar hospital interne, who was visiting at the beach, tried to revive the girl with artificial respiration, but failed.

Dr. Chester H. Golding Jr., Wappingers Falls, Dutchess County medical examiner, pronounced Miss Gonzalez dead. Sanchez suffered shock as the result of his girl friend's death, Dakin said. He was taken to Highland Hospital by ambulance, and enroute he reportedly smashed a window on the ambulance and sustained lacerations.

According to the Associated Press, a warning from Gov. Rockefeller for increased caution on New York's vacation-crowded highways came a few hours too late for the 14 persons who were killed in weekend traffic accidents.

Rockefeller's message, announced Sunday, asked motorists to keep "in mind that many cars and buses will be filled with children" enroute to summer camps.

He also asked State Police to "maintain extra vigilance throughout the travel period, end"

All Americans: Report; Rain of Peace Leaflets

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — Guerrilla fire downed a twin-engine C123 transport 13 miles east of Saigon's airport Sunday night and military officials and civilians reported today 16 bodies were taken from the wreckage.

U.S. military spokesmen announced a U. S. Air Force officer and an enlisted man were killed. They declined to give other details, including the total number of casualties. Their reticence indicated the plane was on a secret mission.

American and Vietnamese visitors to the crash area, however, said the plane slammed into a farmhouse. One military source said he understood it carried 20 men — all Americans — and that all had been killed.

The two officially announced deaths brought the list of Americans killed in Viet Nam by enemy action to 429.

Psychological warfare mingled with bombings in continued air raids on Communist North Viet Nam.

A U. S. spokesman announced U. S. Air Force planes dumped 2.5 million cartoon leaflets over five North Vietnamese cities, urging residents to oppose the Hanoi government.

All the cities were South of Hanoi. They are known centers of Roman Catholicism or other groups potentially likely to be opposed to the Communist government.

The U. S. spokesman said the drops were the beginning of a major leaflet campaign "to be carried out in North Viet Nam 'below a certain line' south of Hanoi. The northernmost city was the Catholic community of Phat Diem, 55 miles south of Hanoi. The others were Thanh Hoa, Bai Thuong, Dong Phong Thuong and Ninh Binh.

Flight Back Safely
No ground fire or enemy planes were spotted, and all eight planes returned safely, the spokesman said.

The leaflets, with cartoons on one side and a text on the other, charged that the Hanoi government was taking fire from the people to feed its troops in South Viet Nam.

Four Americans were killed Sunday night and today in Viet Nam. U. S. authorities announced.

A U. S. Air Force officer and an enlisted man were killed when the Viet Cong shot down a C123 transport plane Sunday night 15 miles east of Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airport. They brought the number of Americans killed in Viet Nam by enemy action to 429.

Would Not Say
Military spokesmen would not say how many other persons were aboard the plane—believed to be a Vietnamese air force transport—or give any other details about the flight. Their reticence indicated that it was on a secret mission.

Two paratroopers were killed by an accidental shot from the shotgun of another paratrooper at the Bien Hoa Air Base, U. S. military authorities reported. They gave no other details.

U. S. and Vietnamese planes also dropped bombs on North Viet Nam today.

In the newest of the reported raids, 12 Vietnamese Skyraider light-bombers accompanied by four Vietnamese Skyraiders attacked a barracks compound 10 miles north of the 17th parallel.

Report on Hits
Four U. S. Navy Skyhawk pilots reported they destroyed or damaged 10 barges, a foot bridge and a highway bridge 80 to 100 miles south of Hanoi.

Four Navy Skyraider pilots reported they attacked a bridge 180 miles south of Hanoi and damaged or destroyed seven railroad boxcars.

All planes operations were reported to have returned safely. But a U. S. spokesman reported that one U. S. Navy A1 Skyhawk went down over North Viet Nam Friday and the pilot was missing.

It was not known whether the pilot was killed or captured.

Three U. S. airmen were wounded early today when the Viet Cong fired mortar shells into the Nha Trang Air Base, 200 miles northeast of Saigon.

U. S. spokesmen reported six Vietnamese soldiers also were wounded. A Vietnamese helicopter was destroyed, two others were damaged and a U. S. Air Force C123 was damaged, U. S. spokesmen said.

Training Station Hit

The Vietnamese naval training station on an island four miles from the air base also came under heavy mortar fire. One sailor was killed and 18 others were wounded, the spokesmen said.

Aircraft dropped flares over the area and government troops began a counter barrage.

U. S. warplanes flew through overcast early today to strike 16 times against the district capital of Touramoung, held by the Viet Cong since Saturday, U. S. military spokesmen said.

Delayed previously by bad weather, Air Force B57s and Marine Corps Phantom jets destroyed one of two 105mm howitzers the Communist guerrillas captured when they overran Touramoung, in the central highlands, the spokesmen said. The other gun was damaged, they added.

Vietnamese relief forces apparently were held back because of the danger of ambush

Coalition With Reds Real Threat: Dirksen

By DON CARSON
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Everett M. Dirksen said today anyone who talks about U. S. concessions in the Vietnamese war should be specific. He warned against establishing a South Vietnamese coalition government which would include Communists.

Speaking on the Republican National Committee radio program "Comment," the GOP Senate leader said:

Should Specify

"Any who talk of concessions by the United States have an obligation to specify the kinds of concessions which they are prepared to advocate."

"Senator Fulbright suggests the Geneva agreements of 1954 'in all their specifications' as a basis for settling the conflict in Viet Nam. But this agreement, as Secretary Rusk acknowledged in 1962 contained a fatal flaw in providing veto power to the Communist member of the international commission established to supervise the execution of the terms of the Geneva settlement."

Must Be Avoided
"This mistake must be avoided in any future peace settlement. So must the mistake of establishing a coalition government with Communist participation for South Viet Nam. Bitter experience should have taught us that such a coalition merely defers a Communist takeover."

Dirksen's personal references were to Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

In a June 15 speech to the Senate, Fulbright said U. S. policy "has been — and should remain — one of determination to end the war at the earliest possible time by a negotiated settlement involving major concessions by both sides."

Had Seen Johnson
He did not specify what these concessions were, but said one possible term of settlement might be acceptance of the 1954 Geneva accords "in all their specifications."

Fulbright's Senate speech came one day after he had conferred with President Johnson. The senator later said that Johnson asked him only to detail administration efforts to achieve negotiations.

Speaking on the program with Dirksen, House Republican Leader Gerald Ford said:

"The United States could not agree today — any more than in 1956 — to legitimizing Communist control of all of Viet Nam by the device of a Communist-style election.

"The Eisenhower administration labored to build out of the chaos in South Viet Nam a durable economy, a progressive social order and military strength. That it achieved a considerable measure of success was attested to by several of Senator Fulbright's colleagues."

Weekend Actions
In weekend developments revolving around the Viet Nam war, — Adlai E. Stevenson, U. S. ambassador to the United Nations, said if a vote were taken in the United Nations now it would conclude that U. S. bombing of North Viet Nam "was a mistake."

Speaking on NBC's radio and television program "Meet the Press," Stevenson said, however, that he didn't believe the U. N. members would condemn the United States for its Viet Nam actions.

The ambassador also said the United States would not object to Communist Viet Cong representatives at any Viet Nam peace talks.

Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri suggested that the United States pause again in its bombing of North Viet Nam. The bombings of the Communist North were halted from May 12 to 18 after Shastri had proposed such action as away to encourage negotiations.

"The first pause almost went unnoticed," Shastri said on the CBS radio and television program "Face the Nation."

"There was no prior announcement. It was a short pause and I do not think it could produce the desired results," Shastri said.

— The United States declared that Red terrorist acts and threats in South Viet Nam will only strengthen American determination to help prevent a Communist takeover.

On Red Threats
"These Communist threats to intimidate our course will not succeed," the State Department said in a statement.

The statement was issued following the Communist execution of an American soldier, a Saigon restaurant bombing which killed 44 persons and a threat to kill U. S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor and other leaders.

In Texas, where President Johnson spent the weekend, press secretary George E. Reedy had no comment on the

Lions Help Servicemen To Phone Families

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Omaha Lions Club is picking up the tab these days for telephone calls to such places as Washington, D.C., and New York City. It's costing the club $40 to $65 a day, and though members never pick up a telephone themselves, they love it. The Omaha Lions have underwritten a program of helping military men passing through Okinawa en route to and from the fighting in Southeast Asia to talk with their families back home. About half the calls originate with men hospitalized at Camp Sukan, the Marine base on Okinawa.

A group of Omaha amateur radio operators who built and operate a short-wave station for the Omaha-Douglas County Red Cross headquarters have set aside the hours of 6 to 7:30 a.m. daily for traffic with amateur stations operated by Marines stationed on Okinawa.

In Omaha, fellow hams — many of them professional men — place long-distance telephone calls to the homes of these service men, and make a telephone "patch" so they can talk directly with wives, children and parents back home. The quality of the transmission "is like a local call," one amateur boasted.

Health for AllBlock Those Fumes

Looking around for something to feel optimistic about? Then the state of air pollution control — or its future, anyway — invites your gaze.

Amid the foggy foggy dew of debate on this often murky matter, a ray of light has shown through. It isn't bright, warming enough to clear up the whole atmosphere. But it does illuminate the possible shape of things to come.

It happened during recent hearings on phase of the air pollution problem that has bothered a lot of people: the role that auto exhaust fumes are said to play in messing up your national ozone. The car makers, while doubting that exhaust fumes are at all responsible, allowed that something could be done about the problem. As the New York Times put it, "the industry, for the first time, offered a timetable.... This underscores that fact that the auto makers have resigned themselves to the idea that exhaust controls are inevitable."

Thus history repeats itself — and sometimes encores its best performances. Not long ago the horseless carriage designers were having fingers pointed at them for allegedly neglecting safety devices. After taking it on the bumper for years, they produced a whole range of anti-accident gimmicks. And everybody was happier, including the car makers.

Now the car industry is receptive to the idea of equipping all new cars with controls for exhaust fumes and crankcase contaminants, such as are already required by the State of California, beginning with 1966 models. All the car makers want is a little time — say a couple of years. Meanwhile, there are still a few other phases of the problem to be worked on — like industrial fuel wastes, trash burning, home furnaces, tobacco smoke.... Want to take a hand? The National Tuberculosis Association has a free leaflet called, "Air Pollution. The Facts which tell what you can do. Ask your local Christmas Seal association for a copy."

U.S. Scientists Working On Purifying Sewage

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Alchemy, says the dictionary, is the process of transforming something common into something precious. Federal scientists here are close to doing just that.

They're transforming common sewage into precious water.

"We're sure we can make the equivalent of drinking water," says Francis M. Middleton, head of the project at a special center.

It operates under the government's five-year, $3-million advanced water treatment program.

Potable water, however, is not the goal. None of Lebanon's 7,000 residents will drink it. It's intended for agriculture and industry.

The water will be purer than it was originally. It also will be cheaper by almost 50 cents per 1,000 gallons than converting salt water into fresh water.

Middleton says the $150,000 government facility expects to produce its first purified water around July 1.

Crawford Learns Of Judy's Death While in Spain

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Broderick Crawford had been in Spain making a movie when the news came. He and Janet Leigh and Don Murray and other members of the film company had met in the lounge of their hotel before what was to be a festive evening. An American tourist approached their table and blurted out the news: Judy Holliday had died of cancer in New York.

News Stuns Crawford
"Excuse me a moment," said Crawford and he left the table. When he was alone, he let the tears flow. He returned to the party but gaily was impossible and the group broke up early.

Returned to Hollywood, Crawford was still stunned.

"Judy dead? It doesn't seem possible," he said. "I had no idea that she had cancer."

He began to reminisce. Brod had met Judy when he was assigned by Columbia Pictures to play Harry Brock to her Billie Dawn in "Born Yesterday."

She had the advantage of having played her role for three years in "Gerson's" play. But Brod and Billie Holden rehearsed with her for two weeks, then did the script as a play before live audiences on a studio stage. They quickly became a smooth-working team.

Leaves for Location
As the Washington, D.C., location approached, Crawford was summoned by Columbia boss Harry Cohn.

"Cohn asked me, 'You fly?' I said, 'Sure, I fly.' He said, 'Judy doesn't fly. She wants to take the train to Washington.' I could see what was coming: Cohn wanted me to go with Judy and her mother on the train. I said I'd do it."

"Well, it was quite a trip. Judy was having a weight problem, and I'd tell you what she had to eat all day: four hard-boiled eggs and half a head of lettuce. It was pitiful to sit opposite her in the diner. I got so I couldn't finish my steak. I'd tell the waiter to wrap me up a club sandwich and I'd eat it in my compartment later."

Judy Wins in Cards
"There was a problem of what to do during the train trip. I asked her, 'You play gin rummy for real, as well as on the stage?' (Billie's game with Brock was the funniest scene in the play.)

"She said, 'Yeah, I play gin. Wanna play?' I said sure, because I considered myself a good player. You know what happened? We played gin the whole time on the Super Chief to Chicago and then on the Twentieth Century to New York and to Washington."

"By the end of the trip, I owed her $483."

Judy Awarded Oscar
They finished the picture and it was an immense success, winning an Oscar for Judy and a nomination for Brod. As the previous year's winner for "All the King's Men," he handed her the big prize at the academy ceremonies.

Their professional paths diverged, but Brod and Judy remained friends. Two years ago he was going through New York on his way to do a film in Europe, and he called her.

"I said, 'Let's have dinner,' and she said, 'Fine—I'll meet you at Sardi's.' Well, we had great fun talking about old times. When it was time to go, I said, 'Let's have a game of gin.' She said, 'Okay, how much?' I said 'Ten bucks.'"

"So we sent for a deck of cards and we played one more game of gin. Know what happened? You're right — she won my 10 bucks! Good old Judy."

Investor Forum

When the Chairman of the Board of the powerful Federal Reserve Banking system made a statement at Columbia University recently, that some similarities exist between 1929 and 1965, a deluge of stock selling followed. Was this selling logical?

No. But the emotional bases of the stock market are broadening and deepening constantly. That is why, now and in the future, investors should not be catapulted into these mass movements.

In 1965, our country has ten times as much responsibility economically and financially, as it did in 1929. The supreme question today is: "Has the country the means at hand to meet these responsibilities?"

Twenty-five years ago, the federal debt was about $64,000,000,000. On May 26th, 1965, it was at $318,000,000,000! Private and public debt has grown enormously during this time. Paying interest and meeting maturities necessitate prosperity.

And with world turmoil growing, it is difficult to see how the Federal budget can be reduced in the future. In fact, Federal expenditures will increase. Where will the $100,000,000,000 a year come from to pay Uncle Sam's gigantic expenses? From a prosperous economy.

Down in Washington, plans are under way to lift the ceiling on the Federal debt. Of course, Congress will have to approve whatever legislation is required to keep our government solvent.

In the future, as in the past, the U.S. Treasury Department spends more than it takes in, more bonds must be authorized and too much of the time this deficit financing creates more money.

Thus, unbalanced budgets cause the Federal debt to grow, which, in turn, creates more inflationary dollars and this phenomenon permeates the economic structure of America, causing prices, wages, and costs to go higher and higher.

It is my judgment that the positive factors in the national economy far outweigh the negative ones. And when this is said, I do not for a moment wish to discount the great responsibilities that the government has to promote prosperity.

In 1945, there were 140,000,000 people in the United States.

Today, there are about 194,000,000. Population growth here in 20 years exceeds the total current population of the United Kingdom! What will the U. S. population be in 1985? At least 250,000,000.

With standards of living steadily improving, any investor with idle funds can see that the corporations in America have ahead of them 20 years of prosperity. And by the year 2,000, the U. S. population will be at least 300,000,000!

Signs of recession, proclamations of bad things to come, and plain economic pessimism may for a time obscure the long-term trend in America.

But any stockholder who allows these temporary negative forces to cause him to dump good stocks for deteriorating dollars needs new perspective.

I was a big buyer of good stocks during the week when the warning was given by the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. I spent $50 in the two days making long-distance telephone calls. I always like to buy sound equities when a selling surge is on.

Nineteen-sixty-five differs completely from 1929. Today, America has many more public responsibilities and, at the same time, it has the means at hand to meet them.

THE FORUM
(Q) "Last year, I sold $25,000 of stocks at profits, paid a $4,000 capital gains tax, and now have this money available. I made a big mistake. Should I buy these stocks back for $28,000 now?"

B.H.B.
(A) Yes, if they are all high-grade equities.

Today's Business Mirror

By SAM DAWSON AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market has ignored all the reassuring words from Washington officials and all the pleasant statistics of business and consumer prosperity. Traders, brokers, government and corporate officials are busy trying to agree on the reasons for sliding prices.

Says Mood Is Caution
Most cite the moderate trading volume, compared to some previous price breaks, as evidence that this has been a buyer's strike rather than rush to dump stocks. Several security analysts say the mood is caution—not the "gloom and doom"

Exam at Highland
ALBANY — State Comptroller Arthur Levitt today announced the completion of the examination of fiscal affairs of a number of towns, villages, schools and other special districts throughout the state, including Highland Central School District, Lloyd.

Copies of the examination reports have been sent to the clerk and other officials of the units of government examined. Since the reports are a part of the public record, they are available for review by interested citizens. A copy of each of the reports is also on file at the Department of Audit and Control, in Albany, and is available for public inspection.

After Expansion Plans
Most brokers seem to agree that the public hasn't taken fright. Those businessmen who are going on the record insist that the Wall Street tremors haven't changed their plans to expand for future business nor their predictions that the rest of this year should see healthy, if unspectacular, gains.

Why the caution of late? The Viet Nam war, the Dominican crisis, the alarms now and then around Berlin, all make people cautious. Also, the current economic upswing is 52 months old, a peacetime record. There is a debate over whether that President Johnson warned against.

And the drop in the United States has been smaller this year than in many overseas stock markets.

Prices Cancel Gains
Even so, measured by popular averages, prices on the New York Stock Exchange have canceled all the gain of this year. The bellwethers have dropped 9 per cent from the high point reached May 14. But the price decline, though persistent, has not been as steep as in some past breaks, notably the one just three years ago. The 1961-62 tumble was 27 per cent.

The Dow-Jones index of 30 industrials Friday dipped below the low point (857.45) reached last December before the market rallied from its last major weak spell.

Huge New Shop-Rite
A giant new Shop-Rite Supermarket averaging over half a city block long in both directions will open in Hamilton Township at 2735 South Broad Street, Trenton, N. J. on June 30. "No expense has been spared to make this store one of the most appealing and attractive in this area," Al Aidekman at Supermarkets Operating Co., said.

KINGSTON NEW YORK, JUNE 28, 1965

MISSISSIPPI BRUTALITY

An investigating team from the National Council of Churches has made some shocking revelations about bad treatment of civil rights workers held in a Mississippi "concentration camp." Conditions in the prison compound at Jackson apparently are a throwback to the uncivilized practice of inflicting brutality and other mistreatment on prisoners as a deliberate part of their punishment—a kind of primitive "extra" added to the penalty of mere imprisonment itself.

John M. Pratt of New York, counsel for the Council of Churches' Commission on Religion and Race, told newsmen after the investigation that he and his fellow members of the group found "conditions of indescribable brutality" in the prison compound. It was there that several hundred demonstrators were imprisoned after being arrested while attempting to march on the state capitol to influence legislators at work on voting legislation.

The intolerably bad treatment of the prisoners, said Pratt, was intended to "break the spirit, the will, the health and even the body of each individual who dared to assemble peaceably to seek a redress of grievances." This attribution of intent may be stating the case too strongly. But even if allowances are made for the discomforts and hardship that might be a natural result of herding so many people together without proper facilities for their care, this is a terrible indictment of the state of Mississippi and the racial attitudes that motivate its official actions.

There is no justification for such treatment of human beings by a political unit that is, willy nilly, a part of the United States. If Mississippi cannot conduct its law enforcement more humanely, it seems not unreasonable to ask that the federal government intervene.

FOR MAN'S BENEFIT

What would be the first government-private industry use of a nuclear explosion for peaceful purposes is now under study by the Atomic Energy Commission.

The proposal is to set off a blast 4,000 feet underground in New Mexico's San Juan Basin to fracture "tight" gas-bearing rock formations.

A study by El Paso Natural Gas Co. and the U.S. Bureau of Mines, with technical assistance from the AEC, indicates that nuclear explosions would increase production of natural gas fields by about seven times over the amounts now attainable.

The study, called "Gasbuggy," is part of the AEC's Plowshare Program to develop industrial and scientific uses for nuclear explosions. Other possible projects that have been suggested in the past are harbor dredging and blasting a new canal across Central America.

In "Gasbuggy," a 10-kiloton bomb (equivalent to 10,000 tons of TNT or five million quarts of nitroglycerin) would be used. It would vaporize the rock into a subterranean chamber about 350 high and 130 feet wide, which would become a reservoir into which gas would flow from fractures around it. The reservoir would later be tapped by drilling a hole to it from the surface.

The practical use of controlled nuclear reactions is now old hat. In the past 10 years, as many as 18 nuclear-fueled electric power plants have begun operation. It is only a matter of time—and an increasingly short time—until the violent aspect of the atom is also harnessed for the benefit of man.

FAIR, WITH STORM CLOUDS

Employers who enjoy wrestling with personnel problems can have a ball with the new Federal Fair Employment Practices law.

The law is aimed at eliminating employee discrimination not only in terms of race or color, but of sex. Men and women are now to be treated exactly the same, period.

So the boss can make a fun game out of such puzzles as:

Case One: The curly blonde on the reception desk is a smash with customers and clients. But a big, burly guy in the shipping room has applied for the receptionist job and his aptitude tests show he could han-

'These Days'

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

BARUCH, A GREAT CONSERVATIVE

Every wayfaring U.S. journalist must have had some contact with Bernard Baruch during a span of public life that endured for at least three ordinary generations, so the memories that any one of us can add to the pool of knowledge about the grand old man are hardly calculated to affect the broad outlines of his biography. But in the many eulogies of Bernard Baruch I missed the flavor that came through in my own spasmotic relations with him. Bernard Baruch, despite the fact that he was adviser to far more Democratic politicians than Republicans, was fundamentally a great conservative.

Back in the late Thirties I was assigned to do an article for Fortune magazine on preparedness for war. The big source for such an article was, obviously enough, Bernard Baruch. My researcher and I had several sessions with him at his home, and in the course of much fascinating talk about his annual reunions with the members of his old World War I War Industries Board he set a figure on the cost of preparedness that seemed absolutely staggering. When the magazine, in making its own recommendations, trimmed it down, Baruch said, "Well, I guess Harry Luce lost his nerve." I had to explain to him that the Baruch figure never got to Mr. Luce; we hadn't dared put it into a first draft of the article. Subsequently, of course, Baruch was vindicated; indeed, the war preparation costs of 1941 and 1942 vastly exceeded his own projections.

Baruch was on the outs with the Roosevelt Administration domestically during the late Thirties. In our conversations he kept referring to the dominant New Dealers as the New Stealers. He hated their inflationary economic measures. They, in turn, had little that was good to say about the Baruch influence inside the regular Democratic Party organization, and referred to him contemptuously as "the old coot." "How can you love the Democratic Party," asked New Dealer Leon Henderson on one occasion, "when you consider that the Virginia, Carolina, Georgia, and Arkansas Senators are owned by Baruch?" Baruch did not, of course, "own" them. They were with him because he wanted the Democratic Party to "stay off the inflationary heights" in the big campaign to spread social justice and pull the country out of depression.

Again, history vindicated Baruch. The inflationists managed to produce a big decline in the purchasing power of the dollar without making much of a dent in the heavy unemployment totals of the Thirties. It was not until Roosevelt became "Dr. Win-the-War" by listening to Baruch's ideas on industrial mobilization that the depression was finally routed. In summing up his attitude to the Nineteen Thirties, Baruch said he was for the T.V.A. social security, and the minimum wage, but against the New Deal as a whole because it "worked against curative processes."

As a conservative, Baruch kept up with books which the advanced Keynesians among the New and Fair Dealers and the New Frontiersmen wouldn't have been caught dead owning. He was particularly perturbed on those occasions when one of the great book review mediums of the nation would fail to give notice to a conservative work which he personally approved. When Henry Hazlitt's critique of Keynesian economics appeared he called me up to ask what could be done to get behind publicizing it. On another occasion he asked what he could do to help an anti-Keynesian book which I had written. He offered to write to the book review editors about it.

Now that Bernard Baruch is dead, all factions will claim him. And, in a sense, this will be right, for he wanted very much to unite the factions in a broad program that would preserve America as the cornerstone of a peaceful world. But the man who had made his millions in Wall Street by knowing when goods were more valuable than money, and vice versa, would never admit that an inflationist could be of good citizen in his economic life. In claiming Baruch for their own, the economic conservatives have a case that cannot be gainsaid.

THE WELL CHILD

Sore Throats Recur After Tonsillectomy

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

A reader asks what would make her daughter, 5, have frequent sore throats. The child's tonsils were removed about two years ago in the hope that this would put an end to the sore throats. Although removal of the tonsils will prevent future attacks of tonsillitis it is no guarantee against sore throats.

Most attacks of which the sore throat is accompanied by a fever are caused by streptococci or by various viruses. Some children in their first few years have a poor resistance to such infections.

Members of this child's household should be tested to see whether any of them are carriers of the causative organisms—especially streptococci. Aside from avoiding contact with persons who have colds and sore throats or who are carriers there is no satisfactory means of prevention.

The cause is a streptococcus, however, penicillin can be relied to effect a prompt cure. The commonest cause of recurrence is stopping the treatment too soon.

Q—I have been taking my daughter, 8, to a skin specialist for several months for pityriasis rosea. She just gets over one bout and it starts all over again. What do you advise?

A—Since pityriasis rosea, a rash, usually clears up without treatment in six or seven weeks and since second attacks are rare, I wonder if your daughter's present rash is really pityriasis rosea. I would stop all medication for two weeks. If the rash is still present or returns you would be within your rights to get the opinion of another skin specialist.

Q—My daughter, 5, has infectious mononucleosis. According to our doctor she is younger than most persons who get it. Will she have an increased susceptibility to this disease when she reaches her late teens?

Infectious mononucleosis is a relatively mild disease that clears up spontaneously. It is most common in adolescents and young adults. Since a second attack is extremely rare your daughter need not worry about a return engagement.

Q—My daughter, 8, was given a glucose tolerance test. She had no sugar in her urine but the blood showed a high sugar level. If this was inherited did she get it from her father or her mother?

A—Diabetes is an inherited disease in many but not all cases. It is not passed from mothers to sons (sex-linked inheritance) like color blindness. Thus your daughter may have inherited a tendency to this disease from either parent or both.

Q—Does he get it?

Case Two—You are running a barber shop. The cute little manicurist is a barrel of fun. But you know in your heart that a middle-aged porter in the building, who wants the manicurist's job, could wield the nail file and the scissors just as well as the gal and could also talk baseball and the races with the customers. What do you do?

But at least one decision is still easy for the employer. He doesn't have to give a male employee time off to have a baby.

But is it really fair not to.

"Now if We Can Just See Our Way Clear . . ."

Washington News

WASHINGTON — (NEA) —

Some Washington observers who watched presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy meet critics of President Johnson's Viet Nam policy on television think he rubbed their noses a bit too hard in the dust of past history.

When Prof. Hans Morgenthau of the University of Chicago voiced pessimism over our prospect of containing communism in Asia, Bundy reminded him and his national audience that Morgenthau years ago thought the Marshall Plan for foreign aid an inadequate tool against communism in Europe. Later the professor hailed the plan.

To some practiced listeners here, Bundy's resort to "old quotations" was judged a debater's trick, a "desperation tactic" which he might have turned to only if he was losing the debate. (He was not.)

There are, of course, numerous observers who thought Morgenthau and other academic critics deserved to have Bundy shatter the shell of infallibility with which they have surrounded themselves while ascribing nearly total error in Viet Nam to various U. S. administrations from the Eisenhower regime on down.

THE HARSHER RESPONSE

SERVES, however, to point up afresh how difficult it is for "Mac" Bundy to shake off the clichés which portray him as a hard-hearted, hard-lining cold fish who chops people off at the gables and is intolerant of rival argument.

Bundy himself finds this image both distasteful and inaccurate, and so do most of his friends and close associates.

He believes he argues just as much for the soft line as for the hard line in the struggles with aggressive communism. And he considers himself as progressive in socio-economic matters as many of his critics insist they are.

"Tending the dikes" against Communism is to him an obviously fundamental endeavor which has to accompany or precede the cultivating of the fields.

Committed to that notion, he is admittedly tough in stripping away all matters which do not apply. What he calls the "razor of relevance" is the sharp edge by which he tests the use of his time and his mind. Bundy does not see why he should have to turn to softening niceties in daily practice either with his "brother bureaucrats" or his one-time academic colleagues. But if they demand that, he adds, then "maybe they decide you're tart."

BUNDY'S EARLIER DAYS gave substantial support to the contention that he is far from a ruthless ramrod. A friend and schoolmate says he was always in the vanguard of liberal changes and against conformity. He was — and is — an attentive student of people's character and mood. The friend adds —

"He does not dominate you with his own ideas. You find yourself talking about yourself. And you discover that he's not drawing you out just to make you feel good. He's genuinely interested."

A White House associate remembers that when one of Bundy's friends here in town was in some sort of trouble Bundy was the first man to call him and offer help.

None of this is intended to indicate he is primarily soft. Nor is he soft on himself. As writer Sidney Hyman puts it: "He did not try to wriggle his way into the brotherhood of the blameless" when the Bay of Pigs fiasco occurred in 1961.

The counter-evidence providing a more balanced view of him may pile up. Yet "Mac" Bundy, through what one observer calls his "disconcerting self-confidence," seems destined to go on fighting his harder image.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

East of Damascus in the steep chocolate mountains of the desert there is a Coptic Christian village called El Akbir. It consists of adobe huts and, from a distance, it looks like a white wildflower. The men, as well as the women, wear half veils to keep the stinging sand riding the winds from their faces. El Akbir was the home of Jetta, the ascetic.

Often, he took his donkey and the straw-filled tumbrel to the top of the mountain, where he fasted and prayed for the sinners of El Akbir. He slept in the old rig and fed the straw to the donkey. Children fled at sight of the emaciated frame, walking barefoot with a staff before the placid donkey. "Sinners," he moaned between the empty spaces where teeth had once stood. "Sinners! Repent! Flout yourselves in the dust before the vengeance of God!"

The women, at work in the houses, heard him. They looked through the empty squares of the windows and shook their heads. They too feared the holy man. And so did the men of El Akbir. The men made a pretense of scoffing and mimicking the old man with the flowing beard, but they feared his pointing finger.

Only Hassan, the mayor, was unafraid. He felt pity for Jetta. But Hassan was an atheist, a ball of fat who subscribed to all the pleasures of the flesh. He was mayor and chief of police and judge. The people were not afraid of Hassan. He dispensed justice with his palms up, and he even shared his store of corn when the winters were severe. He taxed the prosperous and, except for a little for his own pocket, gave the rest to the poor.

Jetta had a young sister named Caisa, whom he despised. She cooked for him and knelt to wash the alkali dust from his feet, but the sight of her revolted him. "You," he roared, "are the occasion of sin; the vessel of iniquity; the fall of the angels! But for you, men would see the face of God!" Caisa shrunk from her brother, because he was not only the Holy Man of El Akbir, but he was also the conscience. She was forlornly in love with a young shepherd named Guzman, but Jetta ordered her never to glance at the boy, for fear of contaminating him with desire. The shepherd begged the callous wisdom of Hassan the atheist. The mayor said: "Love her. Marry her. The law protects you from the wrath of Jetta." Guzman heard what he wanted to hear, but he was afraid. He tended his sheep in the steep grazing ground above the village, watching the parade of celestial objects across the skies without seeing them.

One night Jetta shouted him-

Johnson Places Onus For Balking Viet Peace

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — President Johnson was well-advised to make the kind of speech he did in San Francisco at the 20th Anniversary meeting of the United Nations. He put the responsibility for mediating and eventually settling the Viet Nam war squarely on the United Nations itself. He thus answered once and for all the demonstrators, the pacifists, the week-kneed spokesmen of appeasement and surrender who have insisted that the United States government is merely bent on fighting and isn't willing to sit down and talk things over.

While this gross misrepresentation of America's position has been publicized for many months now, the record is clear today—the United States has declared unequivocally that it is willing to discuss peace in Viet Nam. The pronouncement has been dramatically broadcast all over the world.

This correspondent, after attending the first United Nations conference at San Francisco pointed out that only moral force could save mankind from intermittent wars and that the machinery of the United Nations Charter provides a means of assuring peace whenever there is a will on the part of the major powers to achieve it. But is there such a will today? The Communist powers keep on flanking capitals about warmongering and aggression against the United States and they must know in their hearts that the rest of the world will never give credence to such distortions of the truth.

President Johnson's words, spoken directly to the United Nations, make an indelible record of American policy. He said: "Today, as I speak clear and present dangers in Southeast Asia cast their shadow across the path of all mankind. The United Nations must be concerned. The most elementary principle of the United Nations is that neighbors must not attack their neighbors, and that principle today is under challenge."

"The process of peaceful settlement today are blocked by willful aggressors contemptuous of the opinion and the will of mankind."

"Bilateral diplomacy has yielded no result. The machinery of the Geneva Conference has been paralyzed. Resort to the security council has been rejected. The efforts of the distinguished Secretary General have been rebuffed. An appeal for unconditional discussion was met with contempt. A pause in bombing operations was called an insult. The concern for peace of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers has received little and very disappointing response.

"Therefore, today I put to this world assembly the facts of aggression, the right of a people to be free from attack, the interest of every member in safety against molestation, the duty of this organization to reduce the dangers to peace and the unsettling readiness of the United States of America to find a peaceful solution."

"So I now call upon this gathering of the nations of the world to use all their influence, individually and collectively, to bring to the tables those who seem determined to make war. We will support your efforts and we will support your efforts for peace by any agent or agency of these United Nations."

What challenge could be more specific or explicit? Yet there were captious editorials in some metropolitan newspapers the next day which did their own country no service by belittling the effort made by the President of the United States in his address at San Francisco and accusing him of being vague.

Small wonder that it is difficult for America to mobilize the opinion of the world behind genuine moves for peace. Perhaps this is one of the reasons why the United Nations hasn't been able to initiate and negotiate a withdrawal of the Communists from Viet Nam, which would, of course, mean immediate peace. American public opinion has not been unanimously expressed throughout the country or even in Congress. This is a barrier to peace.

The United Nations is not and cannot be a super-state, but it can be a strong federation of independent states guided by moral force. For this is the only way to maintain peace in the world, and obviously there is no means of coming to grips with arbitrary, autocratic and imperialist governments except by penetrating "iron curtains" and reaching into the hearts and minds of peoples everywhere who by their concerted will can abolish autocratic governments.

For human beings, irrespective of race or color, want peace, and they must inevitably come to understand how failure to stop aggressions and little wars can lead to a nuclear war. Copyright 1965, New York Herald Tribune Inc.

self hoarse before the village tavern. He reviled those who drank until the men inside took to throwing the slops at him. They laughed because he did not dodge, and the drops of beer and wine dripped from his whiskers and stained his staff.

Before dawn, he walked back into the village, head down. When he approached the donkey and the little wagon, he noticed a stirring in the straw. Softly, he peeked over the wheel. There he saw Caisa and Guzman. At once, a holy fervor seized Jetta and he quickly hopped on the board which served as a driver's seat and whipped the dozing donkey into a trot.

The ascetic was possessed of ecstatic wrath. He knew that they did not know whether he had seen them, and they dared not move. Wildly, shouting praises to the Lord, he drove out of little El Akbir and headed the running donkey through small brush over a deep cliff. At the last step, Jetta hopped off.

In the dark, he heard the donkey and wagon hit the boulders and his heart was possessed of peace as he heard screams of the humans and the animals. That morning, the Holy Man slept well. He had done a just thing.

At evening, Hassan waddled up to the hut of Jetta, and sat with him. "We have found your animal," he said, smiling. "And the other animals too." Jetta waved the smile away. "You do not fool me," he said. "You are the law here and you will order me to be hanged. Do it, atheist, and do it well and may your soul be damned in hot pitch."

The mayor's smiled broadened. "You did it?" he said. Jetta nodded and rubbed the sleep from his eyes. "Aye," he murmured. "The sinners died in the act of sin." The mayor stood. "You killed them for committing a sin?" Jetta smiled his toothless smile. "Doing God's work," he said softly.

"To save time," the mayor said, "let us consider that this has been a trial. You have stated the crime and the reason. As mayor, I must tell you that I married Guzman for your sister three months ago. They were afraid to be seen together because of you." Jetta stared unblinking.

"They committed no sin. You have committed a grave one, because you have set yourself up as God the Avenger. This, under your law, is blasphemy."

Jetta seemed hurt, almost as though he had counted on being hanged, and was now cheated. "Your crime is too great to be balanced with your life, Jetta. It is the sentence of this court that, for the rest of your natural life, you will wear a sign on your shoulder's saying 'Hypocrite'."

Reeder's Alley Becomes Montana Art Center

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — A run-down, unpaved and rambling alley that's older than this state is becoming an important art center for Montana.

Three ladies got the idea over coffee and started to work in 1961 to transform Reeder's Alley. Built in 1882 by stonemason Louis Reeder, it was intended for fellow bachelors and low-income families.

By the time the trio took over, it had become a slum. They were threatened by a knife-wielding, one-legged sheep herder who didn't like the idea of moving, escaped injury by collapsing walls, and developed blisters on their hands shoveling dirt and debris.

Occupants of the alley—26 pensioners—agreed to move after other housing was found for them. Now the alley has an antique shop, an upholsterer, a book store, a restaurant and the only picture gallery maintained by the Montana Institute of the Arts.

Half a dozen artists rent studios in the old brick and log buildings and do brisk business with Montanans and tourists.

The three who conceived the project are Mrs. Thomas Tobin, daughter of a pioneer Helena family; Mrs. William Harper, a physician's wife, and Mrs. Lou Boedeker, wife of a Montana State official.

Cries for Help In Drowning Are Deemed a Prank

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — A young boy's cries Sunday for help to save a drowning companion were shrugged off as a youthful prank by about 20 persons on a nearby beach.

The Erie County sheriff's department said 13-year-old Ronald Sanders, of Buffalo, was drowned in the Niagara River while wading off Strawberry Island.

He apparently stepped into a steep dropoff.

His companion and close friend, Jack Parks, also 13, of Buffalo, said:

"It was too cold to go swimming so Ron and I waded about 10 feet off shore. A paper bag floated by and Ron stepped out to get it."

"Almost immediately he asked me to help him. He said his feet were stuck to the bottom and he couldn't get them out. Then he went under the water."

On the island shore, about 20 persons watched the event unfold.

Parks screamed to them for assistance, but they thought his desperate performance was a joke.

Despite the cold and swift water, Parks dove several times in an effort to reach his pal.

Then, exhausted, he struggled ashore and finally convinced the crowd there that his friend had drowned. Three unidentified skindivers splashed into the water and began an immediate search.

Within 15 minutes they found Ron's body in 30 feet of water.

The boys had come to the uninhabited and undeveloped island, accessible only by private boat in a boat with their fathers, Ronald Sanders and Donald Parks.

The fathers were strolling in another section of the island when the drowning occurred.

Dear Abby . . .Ouch!*Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have created quite a stir in the town of Casper, Wyoming, where I live.

In protest to the ridiculous styles we women are being forced to wear, I have volunteered to ride a horse down the main street of Casper, wearing only a ribbon in my hair. My friends say I should. What do you say, Abby?

MODERN-DAY LADY GODIVA

DEAR GODIVA: If it's attention you want to attract, I advise against it. Everybody in Casper, Wyoming has SEEN a horse.

DEAR ABBY: The man who has asked me to marry him displays an almost unnatural interest in other women. I have never been the jealous type, and I can certainly understand his finding other women attractive, but he is so obvious it's embarrassing. When we are in a public place, such as a restaurant, he looks around and finds the best-looking woman in the room, and he then concentrates on her. I would notice his eyes going in her direction constantly. When we are in his car, and must stop for a red light, he leans forward so he can see who is in the car to the right. If it's a woman, he just stares at her. He's sweet and wonderful and gives me all his attention when we are alone or in a dark room. This might seem like a petty complaint, but I don't think I could overlook it after we are married. I'd like your opinion.

NO NAME

DEAR NO NAME: Life cannot be lived in a "dark room." Go with him longer and get to know him better. And if he can't lose this objectionable characteristic lose HIM. It would be just a matter of time before you'd be telling it to the judge.

DEAR ABBY: I am to be married soon. My future husband is in the Air Force, which means we can expect to be traveling a lot. We want to get a furnished apartment at first. Our problem is that we are afraid we are going to get a lot of presents that we will not be able to use for a long time. I was wondering if there is any way to tell our friends and relatives that we would rather have money than presents. It would be inconvenient to pile them all in the car when we leave, as we have so much baggage as it is. We probably won't be able to use half the presents and won't have any place to put them in a furnished apartment anyway. Have you a solution for our problem?

MONEY TROUBLE

DEAR TROUBLE: If you are asked if you prefer cash to a gift, then it is entirely proper to state your preference. But it's in extremely poor taste to volunteer the suggestion. Do what all other brides in your boat do. Store your presents at your mother's, or his.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JACK: Forget it. Behind every successful man are ten people who say they went to school with him.

Blames Graduates For $1,500 Damages

FAIRPORT, N. Y. (AP) — Joseph Checho says $1,500 damage was done to his country club in this Rochester suburb during a high school graduation dance.

Checho told police that he ordered the graduating class of nearby Pittsford High School out of the Island Valley Country Club here early Sunday when he discovered a sink had been ripped from a rest room wall.

Checho said water damaged a rug. He said silverware was also taken. Checho told police no alcoholic beverages were served during the event, but that someone had brought in a bottle of liquor.

Southern Louisiana Wars Against Mosquitoes

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) —

The sluggish bayous—the tangled marsh grass and trees draped with Spanish moss, this is the battleground for a war in southern Louisiana.

The war is against mosquitoes.

Mosquito control advisers hope to lean on a squad of swamp fighters to overcome the enemy eventually.

They drafted mosquito fish, which feed exclusively on mosquito larvae, to nip the buzzing biter before they mount waves and wing into New Orleans.

The tiny species of minnow feeds on the mosquito eggs when the insect is most vulnerable. The only drawback is that they die in large numbers when the canals and swamps dry up.

Control workers hope to counter this problem by digging small access ditches around the canals and swamps, hoping enough water will stand to let fish survive until another rain.

One European Book Printing 450 Years Old

Leak in Storage Closet Reveals Historic Treasures at Library

By CHARLES M. MCCARTHY
Freeman Staff Writer

Quite a thing, a public library. One like the Kingston City Library, for instance — which houses a few recent "discoveries" — such as an original European book printing more than 450 years old; an 176-year-old printing made by Isaiah Thomas, who is considered the first great American printer and who saw the finished product called the Declaration of Independence even before the forefathers of our country; and a 159-year-old bill of sale written in Dutch involving the Town of Hardenberg(h) and the Livingston family whose members played an integral part in the early formation of our country. And a few other interesting items.

Except that the "discoveries" aren't out for public loan.

Don Sager, library director, explained how the discoveries were made.

It all began recently, he said, when a leak was discovered in a wall leading to a basement room, believed to be a storage closet. Gaining entry into the room, he said, numerous books and documents—all of which appeared to be antiquated—were found buried beneath about four feet of old newspapers.

Further inspection Sager said, revealed that the books were indeed antiquated.

Reaching down from a set of shelves in his basement office, Sager outlined the discoveries to The Freeman.

"This is the oldest," he said as he lowered gently to a table a rebound volume of Caesar's Commentaries — printed in Venice on Aug. 17, 1511.

He slowly turned the pages of the sturdy parchment and explained the various woodcuts and fine printing in the book.

"But," we asked, admitting to crass ignorance on the subject, "when was this particular printing made?"

He replied obligingly, thinking perhaps we didn't catch it the first time, "Aug. 17, 1511." A twitch of the eye and the best we could assemble word-wise was, "454 years old!"

Sager proceeded with a scholarly interpretation of the works — in this case a 235 publication in rebound parchment—which he said probably served as a school text book.

He explained how many of the woodcuts were used in more than one place and how the printer's "acknowledgment" was given prominence. He pointed to the pages, explaining that they were handmade from the so-called "rag" paper and still bore the screening marks from the processing. This, he said, was a product made when printing was at its zenith as an art. We can see why.

Sager said the book, which at one time had been shelved for public use (it bore an identification letter and numbers on the outside). He explained that the value of the book had been reduced because Caesar's Commentaries have been reprinted numerous times. However, he said, had this particular book been printed 10 years earlier, it would have been categorized as "incunabula," or the particular art in its earliest stages.

The library director said that all such copies are registered and the scholars would know of their availability. Pressed for relative monetary value of the Kingston Library copy, Sager said that its "auction value" was at least $250.

We observed the hand written notes — illegible of course — along the sides of the pages. Probably a student's notes, it was observed. We also noticed the numerous holes throughout the pages of the book. "Bookworms," Sager assured us, "people think there are no such things, but there they are." He assured us that they did not detract from the value of the book.

Early American Next

"Not tremendously valuable, but interesting," Sager said as he placed another book on the table, "an example of early American printing prior to 1800."

This one happened to be "Elements of General History," printed by Isaiah Thomas in 1789 in Worcester, Mass. — one of the first history books printed in the U.S. even preceding the first Bible printed here.

Sager gave a biographical sketch of Thomas, who is regarded as the first "great" printer in this country. A patriot as well as a printer, Thomas printed the earliest drafts of the Declaration of Independence and was the first to read the finished product before it went into the hands of the signers.

Still in its original binding, Sager estimated the book's auction value at about $50.

From there, it was like turning back the pages of history—to use an appropriate phrase. Sager produced "Views of the World with Maps," printed in 1807 when Australia still appeared on the map as New Holland.

Then, "The Works of the Most Rev. Dr. John Tillotson (where the 's' appeared as an 'f'), late Archbishop of Canterbury, containing 54 sermons and discourses on several occasions," published in 1728 in London. An earlier edition was published in "History," Sager observed, "I'm primatur," or authorization for publication after censoring, dated 1694.

Then, history books, biographies and dictionaries such as the "Great Historical, Geographical, Genealogical, and Political Dictionary Bearing on Curious Miscellany of Sacred and Profane History," Sager observed, "I'm glad we don't have to catalog that, we wouldn't have room on the card." That book was printed in 1721.

Second Oldest

Sager proudly produced the second oldest book, which was printed in London in 1624. The book, entitled, "The Workes of That Learned and Reverend Divine John White," was bound with old manuscript.

Probably most valuable of the discoveries from a student-scholar standpoint, Sager said, was a complete set of "Annual Register," which would be comparable to a modern almanac or encyclopedia, dating every year from 1758 through 1822.

Such texts give the reader, among numerous other facts and information, an account of both the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812 from a British point of view. Sager said there were probably 50 or 60 reprints, "but not too many originals," left.

The books, as previously explained, cover a lot of ground and various subjects, some of which range from what could be termed as humorous today to what also could be considered superlative in quality to similar contemporary publications.

For instance, what modern man could make use of "The Cold Water Man or a pocket companion for temperate, by Dr. Springwater of North America," printed in 1832 in Albany.

Or, as an example of another extreme, Sager produced a "Medical Botany" publication of Philadelphia, 1847, in which he said the fine lithographs showed such vivid color and depth that the prints far exceed many similar prints of today. The lithographs noted, J. H. Colen drawing on stone.

Livingston Indenture

Scheduled for mounting on a glass-enclosed frame is a bill of sale for 400 acres of property in the Town of Hardenbergh for a bushel of good winter wheat.

Sager said that the indenture, written in Dutch, indicated the land was sold by Robert Livingston with the signature of his brother Edward Livingston and Philip Livingston's name and signature also on the document.

By the way of biographical and historical background, Sager said that Robert Livingston was one of the drafters of the Declaration of Independence along with Thomas Jefferson; first actual secretary of state, and chief negotiator for the Louisiana Purchase with Napoleon Bonaparte.

He owned property which he called "Claremont," Sager explained, and financed the experiments of Robert Fulton, inventor of the first successful steamboat which was named the Claremont.

Brother Edward Livingston, meanwhile, according to the library director, went to Louisiana where he became what was regarded as the first financial genius in the country. He drafted the constitution and bill of rights for that state and was reputed to be the man responsible for getting the famed pirate Jean La Fitte to participate in the Battle of New Orleans in the War of 1812.

Whence Originate?

"All this history part of Kingston and Ulster County — with a rich heritage dating back 200 years — at your fingertips because of a leak in a wall?" we asked. "And, where did they come from?" Sager explained that most of the books — which numbered about 100 in all — came by boat from Europe and were handed down from one generation to another. Subsequently, he said they were willed to the library. He said that there were no known records of the "discovered" books in the library.

Fully aware of the library's current financial plight, we asked whether the auction value was sufficient to put the books up for public sale. Sager explained that this would require advertising and after expenditures for that plus auctioneer's fees, an appreciable gain could not be realized.

"But what if a private collector came in here and said he would pay double or even triple the auction value for the books?" we persisted.

"Then," Sager said, "it would have to be taken up by the board of directors, trustees of the library."

Meantime, maybe another wall leak will develop somewhere and produce say, the original charts of Christopher Columbus?

Mohawk Jet Service Is Reality on Sunday

UTICA, N. Y. (AP) — Mohawk Airline's long-heralded jet service has become a reality as a British-built BAC 111 zipped 69 passengers from here to New York city in 45 minutes Sunday.

The flight to Kennedy International Airport was 25 minutes faster than the piston-driven Conquairs that make up Mohawk's fleet.

The airline claims to be the first regional airline to initiate jet service.

OUT OF THE PAST—Mrs. Mildred Buddington, assistant at Kingston City Library, and Donald Sager, library director, look over 454-year-old book "discovered" recently in library basement. Sager said book was one of some 100 books and documents found when leak developed in basement closet where they were stored. It was learned that books and documents, which apparently were donated to library from early settlers in Kingston area, and their heirs. Dated back through centuries to oldest original printing turned out in 1511. Although their auction value is not outstanding, Sager said, books are steeped in historic value. He said they will be retained in library with some documents, such as an early bill of sale filed in 1806, will be framed for library display. (Freeman photo by Wagenföhr)

Two Charged With Malicious Mischief

Accused of ripping a vessel from the wall and further damaging the toilet at the Route 9W Drive-in Theater early Sunday, two Connolly youths were arrested by State Troopers Carl Van Wagenen and John McMickle on charges of malicious mischief.

Sergeant Henry S. Rhodes of the Kingston substation, said James Rieker, 17, of Third Street, and Walter Whipple, 18, of Connolly Road, both Connolly, pleaded guilty before Justice of the Peace Robert Ferrigan, Town of Kingston.

The youths were released in $50 bail each pending sentencing on Wednesday. Both were ordered to make immediate restitution, troopers said.

Illegal Possession Of Fireworks Charged

Accused of illegal possession of fireworks, two 18-year-old youths were arrested Saturday by Rhinebeck State Police. Nicholas Stacy, of Averill Park, and Roy Zwack, Albany, pleaded innocent before Justice of the Peace George Harrington, Town of Rhinebeck, and the case was adjourned until Tuesday. Bail was fixed at $100. Troopers said the defendants were setting off firecrackers on Route 9 in the Towns of Red Hook and Rhinebeck.

Auto Hits Tree

Walter Vanderbent, 69, and his wife, Agnes, 65, of Shokan, were injured early Sunday when their car went off Bostock Mountain Road, Shokan, and hit a tree. State Police Sergeant Henry S. Rhodes said the injured were treated at Kingston Hospital. Vanderbent suffered a broken leg, ribs and nose, and his wife sustained multiple lacerations of the head and legs, according to a report of Trooper P. H. Lounsbury.

Who is on Vacation

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — I've played before presidents, kings and big audiences all over the world, and I have to confess that I've had more than my share of thrilling moments and exciting experiences.

But a few times in my life I've been scared, and, oddly enough, this was never due to facing presidents, royalty, or huge crowds.

One of the most sobering experiences of my life was my eye trouble, which began about six years ago during my Christmas trip overseas. It started with nausea, dizziness and headaches, and pains in both eyes. At a party for our troupe in Frankfurt, Germany, I almost fell flat on my face; later, in Keflavik, Iceland, I collapsed and had to be treated with penicillin by an Army doctor.

On our return to Hollywood, my family doctor told me that I had a blood clot behind my left eye, gave me some pills and told me to take it easy. Me take it easy? He had to be kidding. I took the pills and ignored his advice.

Three weeks later, I was putting on the green and discovered that I couldn't focus on the ball. This really frightened me, because golf is my REAL racket. It's a game for fellows who are too old for girls and still want to get into a trap.

Then the doctor told me that the blood clot was spreading — and I took a plane for the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City. I tried making jokes.

But the doc didn't laugh. "For the next two weeks," he said soberly, "I don't want you even near a golf course."

I was told that if I didn't slow down I might lose the sight in one eye. A series of treatments followed in which they sent a beam through the retina and mended the vessel behind the eye.

I had to lie very still — not an easy task for me. Fortunately, I haven't had a recurrence.

A strange thing happened to me in Viet Nam last Christmas Eve, when I was driving through downtown Saigon to my hotel. We met a hotel coming the other way. It was frightening.

The American officers' billet had been bombed by the Viet Cong 15 minutes before we checked into our hotel just across the street.

Another thing that gave me butterflies was delivering the commencement address to 120 girls graduating from high school with my daughter Nora last summer.

It gave me a queasy feeling because those kids really expected Ringo, but he was apparently suffering from tonsillitis, so I had to substitute. Which has some logic, when you consider that I had a well-rounded education. I flunked everything.

Youths Training At Jobs Similar To Old CCC Work

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP) — Nearly 2,000 New York State youths will be doing a job this summer similar to what their fathers may have done thirty years ago — sprucing up public property.

Thirty years ago, the federal government financed the work through the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The 1965 version will be a mostly state-financed project designed to provide 1,920 jobs for college and college-bound students or high school graduates planning to undertake vocational training.

Under the plan, made possible by a $657,000 appropriation in the supplemental budget passed by the Legislature last week, 64 communities each will hire 30 youths for such jobs as reclaiming debris-littered wastelands, and improving the appearance of roadside areas, beaches and parks.

The communities involved have not been announced, but the projects begin July 1.

The communities will hire youths locally. The youths, aged 16 through 20, will be paid $1.25 an hour and will work 35 hours a week for eight weeks.

Seaway Traffic Moving Out of Spring Slump

MASSENA, N. Y. (AP) — Shipping on the St. Lawrence Seaway is paralleling the weather this year.

Shipping got off to a cool start in April because of ice conditions, but Seaway Administrator Joseph H. McCann says things are warming up now.

Tonnage moved during April and May was about 8.4 million below the 1964 figure. But, McCann said:

"By the end of June, we should be well ahead of 1964's tonnage for the same period."

State Assemblywoman Dies at 90, Schenectady

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. (AP)

— Dr. Elizabeth Van Rensselaer Gillette, who in 1919 became the first woman elected from an Upstate county to the state Assembly, died Saturday at her home. She was 90.

Miss Gillette, who was defeated for re-election in 1920, was the last Democrat elected to the Assembly from Schenectady County until last fall, when John F. Kirvin was elected.

One Driver Freed By Jury, Other Fined $100 Today

A charge of driving while intoxicated filed against an Esopus motorist in connection with the death last May 2 of an elderly pedestrian in Kingston, was dismissed today in City Court when the current Grand Jury returned a verdict of "no bill" of indictment.

City Judge Joseph D. Saccoman dismissed the charge against William P. Loughlin, 25, of Box 146, Esopus.

Police said Loughlin was driving south on Broadway the night of May 2 when his vehicle struck Claude Chamberlin, 77, of 64 Smith Avenue, an employee of the Community Theatre, near Cornell Street. Chamberlin died in Kingston Hospital about an hour after the accident.

Jury Report Basis

The grand jury returned its verdict in its report June 18. Chamberlin was the 11th traffic fatality in Ulster County.

In other City Court cases: George J. Sickler, 59, of 87 Pearl Street, was fined $100 when he admitted a charge of driving while intoxicated. Judge Saccoman also ordered his driver's license revoked.

Police said Sickler was driver of a car which struck a parked car owned by Milton E. Cole of 114 Stephan Street, which was parked on that street near Florence Street. They said the impact caused the Cole vehicle to strike a parked car owned by Joseph Gallagher, of 111 Stephan Street. The mishap occurred about 10:45 Saturday night. Patrolman Thomas Childs investigated.

John McCormack, 18, of Box 35, St. Remy, paid fines of $5 each when he admitted charges of driving without a license plate and with a faulty muffler. Judge Saccoman suspended imposition of a $5 fine when McCormack admitted a charge of driving without a plate light.

The youth was arrested by Patrolman Curtis Van Demark.

Hearing on a petit larceny charge against James Cahill, 17, of 157 Bruyn Avenue, was adjourned to July 13 when Saccoman ordered a pre-sentence investigation.

Saccoman also ordered a presentence investigation in the case of Myron Lent, 20, of 121 Fair Street, on a charge of endangering the life or health of a child. He scheduled sentencing for July 13.

Lent was arrested Saturday afternoon by Detective Guernsey Burger Jr.

Boy, 16, Is Held As Knife Slayer Of Rugby Player

NEW YORK (AP)—Police are holding a 16-year-old boy without bail in the knife slaying of an Australian rugby player.

Keith North, 24, was fatally stabbed when five youths tried to crash a farewell party in his west side Manhattan basement apartment Saturday night. North had planned to return to Australia Friday.

As North lay dying, several of his guests chased the fleeing youths, tackling four of them on the street. A fifth got away.

Nathaniel Alvarez, 16, who police said was one of the four caught, was ordered held without bail at his arraignment Sunday on a homicide charge. The others caught were released.

Police said the gate crashers found about the party when four girls who had been invited stopped to ask them directions. The girls were followed to North's apartment.

Mrs. Elma North, North's mother, said in Sydney that in his last letter he had written about the number of murders in New York.

"Neither had been on a world working tour and we expected a letter from him any day saying he was on his way home," she said.

North had been employed at the British mission to the United Nations as a utility man.

A friend said North came to the United States last summer to work in a children's camp in East Sullivan, N.H. His student's visa was extended to allow him to work in the British mission, the friend said. He added that North was a member of an Australian rugby team.

Congress May See Fireworks On Medical Patents, Rent

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON (AP)—A rent subsidy provision and an amendment dealing with patents stemming from government-financed medical research may touch off some pre-July Fourth fireworks on Capitol Hill.

The Senate last week passed some relatively minor measures. The House sent to the Senate bills to finance the Defense Department and public works programs. A bill to require health hazard warnings to be printed on cigarette packages, was sent to a Senate-House compromise committee.

Two major bills made long strides in committees last week. The Senate Finance Committee approved the House-passed bill to provide a program of health assistance for the elderly under Social Security.

The House Rules Committee started hearings on the Senate-passed bill to clear the way for House consideration next week.

But an amendment by Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., stirred controversy. It would give the government exclusive rights to any inventions developed through research financed under the program.

Long contends that private patents should not be issued on products developed through research for which the taxpayers pick up the tab. Sen. Lister Hill, D-Ala., floor manager of the bill, says the Welfare Department's general policy is that results of federally financed research should be made promptly available by publication and royalty-free licensing.

In the House, the Johnson administration may get its toughest test of the session when a housing bill containing a controversial rent subsidy provision is voted on.

It is one of three major measures the House hopes to dispose of before its members take an extended weekend recess for Independence Day oratory in home districts.

The housing bill is on Tuesday's House docket. Republicans hope for substantial Democratic help in attempting to eliminate the subsidy provision. The Senate has not yet acted on the measure, but its Banking Committee has approved a modified subsidy plan.

The other controversial bills the House hopes to act on are the administration's Economic Opportunity Act — known as the anti-poverty bill — and a measure to reduce or eliminate the silver content in coins. The Senate passed its version of the coinage bill last week.

The House today takes up the first of the annual series of emergency appropriation resolutions.

These measures have become routine in recent years to meet the financial needs of federal agencies whose annual appropriation bills have not been enacted by July 1, when the fiscal year starts. Only one of the dozen annual bills has gone to the President. It finances the Interior Department.

The Senate was expected to act on the annual military construction authorization bill before taking a long holiday weekend. Congressional leaders were not certain whether the presidential disability amendment would come up for votes this week.

In addition to the coinage bill,

the Senate last week passed some relatively minor measures. The House sent to the Senate bills to finance the Defense Department and public works programs. A bill to require health hazard warnings to be printed on cigarette packages, was sent to a Senate-House compromise committee.

Long contends that private patents should not be issued on products developed through research for which the taxpayers pick up the tab. Sen. Lister Hill, D-Ala., floor manager of the bill, says the Welfare Department's general policy is that results of federally financed research should be made promptly available by publication and royalty-free licensing.

In the House, the Johnson administration may get its toughest test of the session when a housing bill containing a controversial rent subsidy provision is voted on.

It is one of three major measures the House hopes to dispose of before its members take an extended weekend recess for Independence Day oratory in home districts.

The housing bill is on Tuesday's House docket. Republicans hope for substantial Democratic help in attempting to eliminate the subsidy provision. The Senate has not yet acted on the measure, but its Banking Committee has approved a modified subsidy plan.

The other controversial bills the House hopes to act on are the administration's Economic Opportunity Act — known as the anti-poverty bill — and a measure to reduce or eliminate the silver content in coins. The Senate passed its version of the coinage bill last week.

The House today takes up the first of the annual series of emergency appropriation resolutions.

These measures have become routine in recent years to meet the financial needs of federal agencies whose annual appropriation bills have not been enacted by July 1, when the fiscal year starts. Only one of the dozen annual bills has gone to the President. It finances the Interior Department.

The Senate was expected to act on the annual military construction authorization bill before taking a long holiday weekend. Congressional leaders were not certain whether the presidential disability amendment would come up for votes this week.

In addition to the coinage bill,

the Senate last week passed some relatively minor measures. The House sent to the Senate bills to finance the Defense Department and public works programs. A bill to require health hazard warnings to be printed on cigarette packages, was sent to a Senate-House compromise committee.

Two major bills made long strides in committees last week. The Senate Finance Committee approved the House-passed bill to provide a program of health assistance for the elderly under Social Security.

The House Rules Committee started hearings on the Senate-passed bill to clear the way for House consideration next week.

But an amendment by Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., stirred controversy. It would give the government exclusive rights to any inventions developed through research financed under the program.

Long contends that private patents should not be issued on products developed through research for which the taxpayers pick up the tab. Sen. Lister Hill, D-Ala., floor manager of the bill, says the Welfare Department's general policy is that results of federally financed research should be made promptly available by publication and royalty-free licensing.

Gallant Major Counting the DaysOperations Officer Has Rung Up Envious Log

By HAL BOYLE

DA NANG, South Viet Nam (AP) — In a month now the American major whom the Vietnamese call "Tiger Eyes" will be going home, and he's counting the days.

"The bullets seem to hit closer all the time," said Maj. Robert E. Ley, 34, McAlester, Okla., whose wife and four children now live in Edgewater Park, N.J.

From Family of Warriors
"But you can't afford to get overcautious. That's more dangerous than being reckless."

The major, a slender former Army tankman, won his nickname because of his piercing green eyes. He wears a bright orange scarf into battle and comes from a family of warriors.

His grandfather, a Choctaw Indian from Georgia, lost his leg at the age of 13 while fighting for the Confederacy in the Battle of Chickamauga. The major is a 1934 graduate of West Point.

Ley is operations officer of the Da Nang special sector. He and the senior sector adviser, Lt. Col. Charles H. Brown, El Paso, Tex., also an ex-tank officer, have rung up a record here that will make them remembered in South Viet Nam for a long time.

Last October their advisory team, consisting of three officers and eight enlisted men, was given the task of helping organize the safety of a 150-square-mile sector. It included the city of Da Nang and its air base.

"We didn't even have a desk at the start," said Ley.

They had six Vietnamese companies strung around the perimeter and two in reserve. Against them was an enemy force roughly equal in number but more experienced — four "main force" Viet Cong companies and 750 guerrillas.

"The only way we could beat them was to go out and fight them," said Ley. "We didn't curl up and wait for them to hit us. We took the initiative. We surprised them."

The team organized innumerable patrols and 42 assaults of company size or larger. In one operation they flew 700 men in helicopters to smash an enemy grouping.

Their aggressive record speaks for itself. 400 Viet Cong, captured 400, and taken about 100 weapons," said Ley. "We've had only 25 men killed and 60 wounded. We've never had a man taken prisoner, or one who defected.

"We've never had an American killed or wounded. Our troops have stood and fought. Men won't fight unless they are well led. Our Vietnamese officers are fine."

Twice the Viet Cong made attacks on the air base but failed to reach it. The arrival of U.S. Marines in March left the special sector force free to step up its attacks.

"Now there are only about 200 guerrillas left in the area," said the major. "We figure it is only a matter of hunting them down and shooting them."

Ley likes to go on the operations as well as plan them. He has killed three Viet Cong and been awarded the Vietnamese Gallantry Medal with Silver Star.

Onteora Chapter to Be Host To Field Service Students

The Onteora Chapter of the American Field Service will, with the cooperation of over 20 local families, be host to a group of 36 American Field Service students who are due to arrive by bus at the Onteora School parking lot at 5 p. m. Friday, July 2 and who are scheduled to depart from the same place 9 a. m. Monday, July 5. The students represent 26 countries from Europe, Latin America, the Near East, the Far East, and Oceania.

The Onteora host residents who generously have opened their homes to the visitors are: The Musot and Pick families of Bearsville, Schremer family of Lake Hill, Hoyt family of Mt. Pleasant, Carle, Kahl, and Uhney families of Mt. Tremper, Fox family of Olive Hill, Proper family of Pine Hill, Proper and Stowe families of Shokan, Maston and Spanhake families of West Hurley, Lurie family of Woodland and Buoymaster, Hank, Perlman, Schwartz, Stern, Taylor, Rowe and Williams families of Woodstock.

A high point of this American Field Service visit to the Onteora area will be a tour of and movie at the Rotron plant in Woodstock beginning at 2 p. m. Saturday, July 3. A committee chaired by Mrs. Harry Carle of Mt. Tremper has made all arrangements for this and other aspects of the American Field Service stop and any questions may be addressed to her.

These American Field Service students are en route from a year in American communities, as members of families in the communities and students at the local high schools, to Washington, D. C., where they will be received by the President of the United States. From Washington they go to a final meeting of all this year's American Field Service (AFS) students in the United States and immediately following, return to their own countries.

The end-of-stay bus trips are designed by AFS to introduce the students to communities and religions of the United States other than those where they have lived for the preceding school year. The trips give an estimated 100,000 Americans a chance to meet boys and girls from all over the world. 74 buses are making 2-or-3-day stops in an average of six communities each.

The AFS is sponsoring 2,904 students for 59 countries in more than 2,500 American communities throughout the 1964-65 school year, and in return is sending more than 1,000 young Americans abroad. Since the beginning of the AFS international scholarship program in 1947, when 50 students from ten European countries came to the United States, more than 29,000 young people have received AFS scholarships. President Arthur H. Hays Sulzberger, Jr., the Carles of Mt. Tremper, and will arrive shortly before the beginning of the school year.

The AFS is a non-profit organization without political or religious affiliation. It is supported by private contribution. Having served as a volunteer ambulance corps in the First and Second World Wars, the AFS started its present program of international scholarships in 1947 as an effective way to promote international understanding in peace time.

Woodstock Board Names Senecal New Chief Constable

Paul R. Senecal, a member of the Woodstock constabulary for seven years and Acting Chief Constable since October, 1964, was promoted to Chief Constable at a special meeting of the Woodstock Town Board Saturday morning.

Senecal, a retired state trooper, before he joined the Woodstock department, was the only name considered at the 11 a. m. open meeting.

In selecting Senecal, the board disregarded strong public support for Constable Robert Reynolds. The whole constabulary staff, including Senecal, had filed letters with members of the Town Board recommending the selection of Reynolds.

Other public support in behalf of Reynolds was directed to the board in the form of a citizens telegram signed by 12 persons and a petition bearing "more than 60 names."

Supervisor Abram F. Molyneux, who moved for the promotion of Senecal, made no reference to the communications nor did he mention Reynolds' name in the town board discussion.

Effective to January 1, 1966, the appointment is effective until the reorganization of the

Mrs. Wolfert to Read Her Poetry July 11

The Woodstock Art Gallery, always a center for cultural activities, is offering another personality of unusual interest, a well known resident, Helen Wolfert, author, wife of the well known author Ira Wolfert. Mrs. Wolfert's medium is poetry. In addition to writing she is adept at reading, which she will do Sunday, July 11 at 3 p. m.

She has been received with enthusiasm at the Onteora Central School and at the Art Students League. In New York City the libraries and even the late-night clubs have enjoyed her renditions, the reading of her own poetry.

Her newest book, *The Music, celebrates human life, not as we live it, but as it lives in us. An earlier book, *Nothing Is A Wonderful Thing, is very human, life under sordid conditions. A tree grows green in Brooklyn, or a child grows true in the lower east side, the struggle to live above it all. Mrs. Wolfert explains it another way. "There seems to be a cache in all of which is reserved for existence as contrasted with survival."

MRS. JEAN LOVATT BALL, 7 Neher Street, Woodstock, has been appointed Woodstock correspondent for the Freeman. She and her husband, Andrew Ball, are former Kingstonians who have returned to the area after seven years residence in Vermont. They have five children. Mrs. Ball is a former member of the editorial staff of the Freeman and The Lawton (Okla.) Morning Press. In recent years she has acted as advertising copywriter and women's editor, with a daily program, on radio station WJOY, Burlington, Vt. Woodstock news may be sent to her at 7 Neher Street, or telephoned to ORiole 9-9186.

Ciardi to Lead Poetry Evening

John Ciardi, internationally known literary figure, poetry editor of Saturday Review, director of Bread Loaf Writers Conference and author of 24 books will appear at the Woodstock Art Gallery Friday, July 9 at 8:30 p. m. for an evening of poetry.

Ciardi's long list of achievements begins with his early education success at Bates and Tufts colleges and the University of Michigan. His professorships include the University of Kansas City, Harvard, Salzburg and Rutgers. He also took a turn in the Air Force and in the Columbia Broadcasting System television network.

His books have been published over a period from 1940 to 1964 and include his own poems, translations of poetry and essays on poetry. His "How Does a Poem Mean" is a standard text in freshman English courses in a number of American universities.

Ciardi holds honorary degrees from Kalamazoo and Ursinus Colleges and Wayne University. Two fellowships and his election as president of the National College English Association top the list of his honors and accomplishments. Married and the father of three children, he has published eight books of children's poems. The Ciardi appearance is one of a number of poetry evenings sponsored by the Woodstock Artists Association.

Injured in Auto Mishap

A New York City man was injured at 6:50 p. m. Sunday when the car in which he was riding went out of control and hit a bridge railing on Burlington Road, Shawangunk Trooper Charles Tuelon of Ellenville said. Preston Avis, 28, sustained lacerations of the left cheek. John Benson, 28, of New York City, driver of the car, told troopers he was driving north when the right front tire blew out causing him to lose control of the vehicle.

EARBUSTER—The world's loudest sound generating system, the Northrop Mark VII, is testing component systems of the Apollo spacecraft in Los Angeles to assure their ability to withstand tremendous noise pressures generated under launch conditions. The generator is capable of developing 400,000 acoustic watts. An ordinary home hi-fi set played sufficiently loud to warrant neighbor complaints would generate approximately one acoustic watt.

Seven Hurt When Car Overturns Near St. Remy

Seven people were injured and taken to Benedictine Hospital at 3:25 a. m. Sunday when the car operated by Pablo D. Baez, 25, of 60 Franklin Street left the highway on a curve and overturned in a field south of St. Remy. All were taken to Benedictine Hospital, none seriously injured.

Deputy Sheriffs Daniel Levy and James Freer with Town of Esopus Constable Frank Bartoloff investigated and reported Baez was traveling east on Route 212 between Rifton and St. Remy when the driver alleges he was blinded by lights. He lost control on the curve and the car struck a drainage abutment on the left, crossed over to the opposite side of the road and overturned in a field. The car traveled 295 feet from the point where the driver reported he lost control until it stopped.

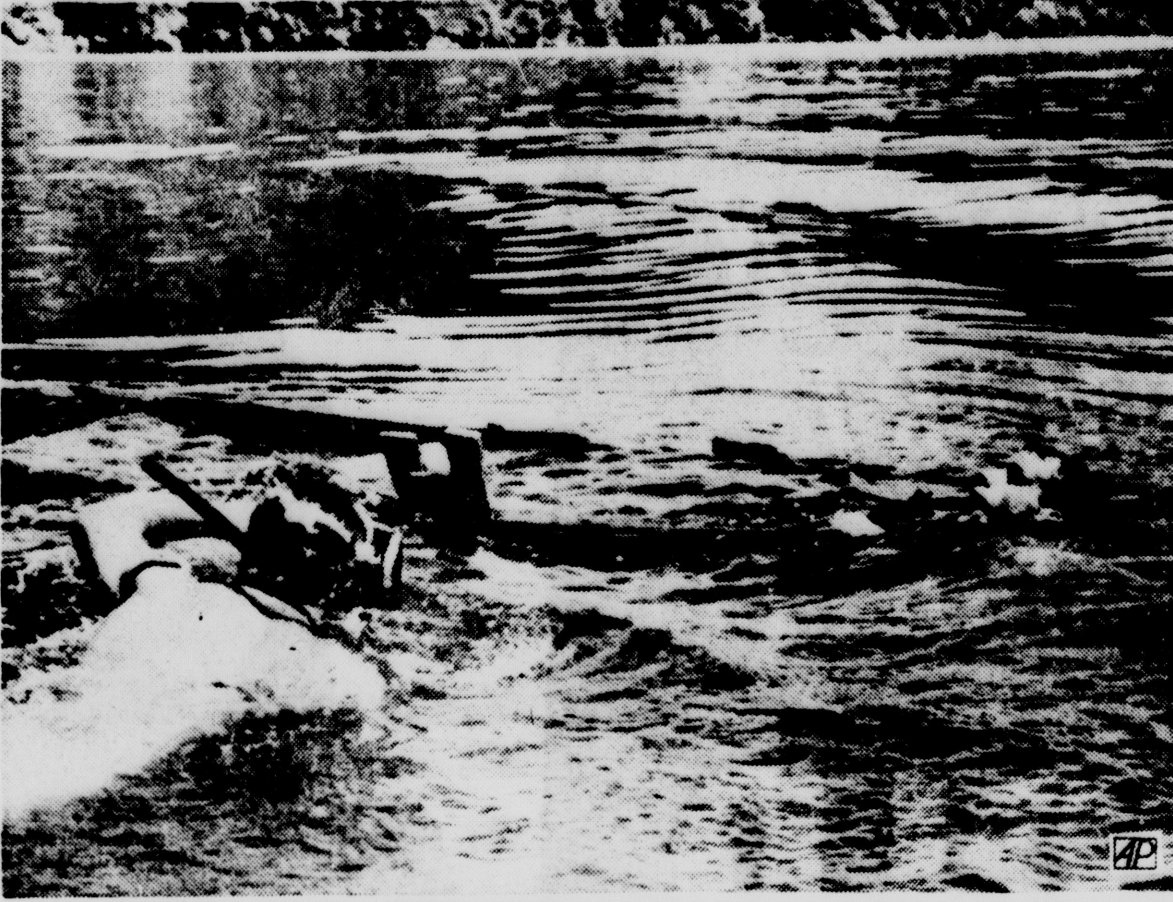

Taken to Benedictine Hospital were:

Pablo D. Baez, 25, driver, lacerations of the left hand and back injuries; Joseph DeJesus, 22, 96 Clinton Avenue, left hand injured and back injuries; Eduardo Alvarez, 22, 46 Boulevard, lacerations of left shoulder and back injuries; Francisco Aponte, 41, 96 Clinton Avenue, lacerations of scalp and back injuries; Evelyn DeJesus, 17, 60 Franklin Street, possible left rib fractures and chest injuries; Raphael Babel, 36, 55 North Front Street, lacerations of left arm and chest injuries; Ricardo Figueroa, 22, 60 Franklin Street, abrasions of forearm and lacerations of left hand.

The driver Pablo Baez was issued a summons to speed unreasonable and failure to keep right. He will be arraigned later.

Democrat State Leader Will Stay In $30,000 Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Democratic State Chairman William H. McKeon of Auburn has made up his mind to continue in his $30,000-a-year post, it has been learned.

McKeon was widely reported to be considering stepping down. He has six children and his wife had been ill.

McKeon has declined comment.

But several county leaders and close friends said Sunday, McKeon has decided to stay on "for the good of the party." A number of persons urged McKeon to stay with the job at least until the November elections.

"If McKeon steps down now the party will surely be tossed into another split," one county leader said.

Would Make Test In Talent Hunt For City Leaders

NEW YORK (AP)—Rep. John V. Lindsay, Republican candidate for mayor, suggested today that cities would benefit if creative persons from commerce and campus traded places for a time with career governmental employees.

In a talk prepared for the graduating class of Stuyvesant High School, which has an outstanding academic rating, Lindsay said:

"In our cities, the problem of middle management talents is critical and the shortages of top-level managerial persons is equally severe."

Elsewhere on the mayoral campaign front:

There still was no word from Lindsay on his choices for candidates for city council president and city comptroller to run on the fusion ticket he plans.

Comptroller Abraham D. Beame called a news conference today at the municipal building. This was seen in some quarters as the stage for an announcement whether he would seek the Democratic nomination for mayor.

Beame has frequently been at odds on policy with Democratic Mayor Robert F. Wagner, who has announced he will not seek a fourth four-year term at the election Nov. 2.

Four candidates already are seeking the Democratic designation for mayor.

The Liberal Party, which could prove the balance of power in the election, begins a city-wide conference today to decide on its choice for mayor. There has been strong sentiment for endorsing Lindsay, but party leaders still were reported to be considering several alternatives. Lindsay has offered to name a Liberal to run with him.

3 Fires in City Over Weekend

City fire fighters were summoned to three weekend fires in various parts of the city.

They used pressurized water to extinguish a blaze on the side of a house at 132 St. James Street shortly before 2 a. m. today. Engines 1 and 2 under deputy Fire Chief Robert Hardwick responded.

Personnel from Engines 1 and 2, Truck 1, Union and Condit Hoss responded to a fire which leveled the old metal pump house at the Garrahan's Cities Service property near the dock at Kingston Point. Firemen under Deputy Chiefs Hardwick and Julius E. Buchholz kept the flames from spreading to nearby fuel tanks. The fire broke out about 7 p. m. Saturday.

A blaze caused by faulty wiring caused damage to fixtures and ceiling in an apartment in a two-story attic frame and brick boarding home at 298 Clinton Avenue owned by Nicholas Dolores, about 12:30 p. m. Saturday.

The fire, which was extinguished by roomers, was in an attic occupied by one of the roomers. Firemen from Truck 2 and Eng. 1 and 2, under Deputy Buchholz, responded.

12 Issues to Face State Voters in November Poll

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP)—When New York State voters step behind the curtain in November, they may be faced with more issues than candidates.

Twelve issues, including nine proposed constitutional amendments, will be on the ballot.

Among the questions is a $1-billion bond issue for a plan to clean up the state's waterways.

The constitutional amendments include one that would increase the terms of legislators from two to four years, effective the 1966 elections.

Voters, acting on the three propositions, will determine whether:

— The state should borrow $1 billion to finance two-thirds of a crash program to curb water pollution. The funds would be used to assist local communities to construct sewage-treatment facilities.

— The state should borrow an additional $200 million to expand its low-rent housing program.

— There should be a constitutional convention in April 1967. The chief job of a convention would be drafting a permanent system of legislative apportionment.

Among the constitutional amendments are proposals that would:

— Increase the length of legislators' terms from two to four years, the same as that of elective state officials.

— Require the governor to submit his annual budget to the Legislature by the second Tuesday after it convenes, instead of by Feb. 1, except following a gubernatorial election when the later date would remain effective.

— Allow the Legislature to give its double approval to proposed constitutional amendments in two successive years. At present, an amendment must be approved by two, separately elected legislatures.

— Authorize the Legislature to stagger the terms of town court justices.

— Establish a program for construction of nursing homes in the same way the state provides for low-income housing.

— Restore a provision that city elections must be held in odd-numbered years, keeping them separate from state and national elections. The provision was eliminated by error in a home-rule amendment adopted by the voters in 1964.

Transfer 28 acres of forest preserve in Hamilton County to the Town of Arietta so the sub-way at Piseco Airport can be enlarged. The town would turn over to the state 30 acres of its land.

Charge Modena Resident Knifed Highland Man

A Modena man was arrested Sunday afternoon on a second degree assault charge, accused of knifing a Highland man during an argument in front of the Hollywood Bar at Clintondale.

Highland State Police booked Peter Elijah Hutchinson, 39, of Modena and Haines City, Fla., on the assault charge. He waived preliminary examination before Justice of the Peace Linn Baker, Town of Lloyd, who set bail at $500 and referred the case to the grand jury for investigation.

According to an investigation by BCI Investigator Richard Ryan and Trooper R. C. Anderson, Hutchinson is accused of knifing Norman Henry, 27, of Highland, during an altercation. Troopers said Henry was taken to Vassar Hospital where 41 sutures were taken to close knife wounds of the chest, side and arm.

The weapon used was described as a homemade razor-knife combination.

Widow Is Seeking $700,000 in Copter Fatality

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP)—A widow is seeking $700,000 from a charter air service for the death of her husband, a Monroe County official, from a helicopter crash during rioting here last July.

Mrs. Winona Abbott has accused Page Airways Inc., at the Rochester-Monroe County Airport, with the negligent operation of a helicopter, her attorney, Michael Telesca of Rochester, said Sunday.

Page Airways has denied responsibility for the crash, Telesca said.

A suit has been filed in State Supreme Court.

Mrs. Abbott's husband, Robert, 49, county civil defense director, was surveying the riot scene July 26 from the helicopter. The helicopter crashed into a rooming house at Clarissa and Tremont streets and burst into flames.

The Civil Aeronautics Board ruled Jan. 20 that a causative factor in the crash was .08 per cent of alcohol found in the pilot's body.

Four Are Injured As Car Overturns

Four people were injured and the driver arrested after a car owned and operated by Chauncey Smith, 20, of Ellenville, overturned at the intersection of Pataukung and Cherrytown Roads, Town of Rochester, early Saturday night.

A state police report stated that Smith was driving east on Pataukung Road and lost control of the vehicle while negotiating a left turn. The car went off the right side of the road and overturned. Smith was arrested for driving at a speed not reasonable and prudent.

Injured in the accident besides the driver were three passengers. They included Raymond Smith, 19, Kerhonkson, who suffered laceration of the back; Nancy Miller, 19, Kerhonkson, abrasion of right ankle and knee and Patrick VanLeuven, 20, Nanapanoch, bruised head.

Explain the Problem

LOUISVILLE (AP)—Mrs. Earle McNary will be more specific the next time she telephones an electrician. Recently, her doorbell wouldn't work. She called a repair shop and asked if they could send a man to fix a little electrical trouble. He promised to stop by the next day. A week passed and no serviceman. Mrs. McNary telephoned the shop again and was told: "I came by the address you gave me the day after you called," the electrician said. "I must have rung the doorbell 10 minutes but nobody answered."

Five Area Fire Companies Busy During Weekend

Five area fire companies were dispatched to Blue Mountain Park in the Centerville fire district early Sunday afternoon to battle a series of fires that were started by sparks and flaming embers from a fire in the old Schoonmaker barn.

Fire Chief Frank Ward said companies from Cedar Grove, Saxton, C. M. Lynch and Mt. Marion aided Centerville volunteers in battling the flames.

A rash of other fires were reported in the county during the weekend by a dispatcher at the County Fire Control Center.

Chief Ward said the large barn was about 150 by 50 feet and towered two or three stories.

It was totally destroyed along with a large supply of old hay. The chief reported a neighbor saw smoke and summoned firemen.

Within moments the large barn was completely engulfed in flames fanned by a brisk wind.

According to the chief, the roof of a nearby barn was ignited by sparks, but firemen saved the building.

Flaming embers and sparks were carried across the back road by the wind and several grass fires broke out.

Chief Ward said several homes in the Blue Mountain Park development were threatened by the burning grass and firemen concentrated the efforts on checking the grass fires.

Firemen were at the scene for hours.

On Saturday, volunteer firemen battled brush fires in the Vly, Atwood and Rifton fire districts. Dump fires were quelled

Well Worth Crooning

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Bing Crosby crooned a few bars of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" as he led Meadow Court into the Irish Derby winner's circle at the Curragh Race Track.

He had reason to sing. Within hours after Crosby bought a one-third share in the horse, Meadow Court earned him $52,940 as his share of the $155,820 first prize money in Saturday's race.

Crosby bought the share from Canadian millionaire Max Bell. He wouldn't say what it cost him, but commented after the race, "I've got my money back now and more."

GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — They sang the old hymns of the South Appalachians, listened to preachers and met with kinfolk at Sunday's 41st annual "Singing on the mountain."

Fifteen thousand persons flocked to MacRae Meadows at the foot of Grandfather Mountain in a misty rain for the non-denominational gathering. Uncle Joe Hartley, 94, founder of the sing, said, "If it had been clear the folks would have broke Grandfather Mountain down."

New York Taxi Strike Aimed at Signing 16,000

NEW YORK (AP) — About 5,500 taxicab workers struck taxi fleet owners today as the workers pushed their demand for union recognition.

The strikers began moves to spread the strike to all the 16,000 taxi drivers in Manhattan, Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens.

The strike started shortly before 2 a.m. as the workers poured out of a mass meeting at Manhattan Center which had started shortly after midnight.

It was called after a voice vote at the meeting, sponsored by the taxi drivers organizing committee, AFL-CIO.

The drivers were instructed to return their cabs to fleet garages, turn in their fare money and set up picket lines.

There are 12,000 metered cabs in the city, 7,000 of them fleet cabs and the remainder operated by owner-drivers.

The strike was urged by Harry Van Arsdale, Jr., chairman of the New York City Central Labor Council, AFL-CIO, and the speaker of the organizing drive.

Seconds after the voice vote Van Arsdale shouted "we can't lose" to the yelling, chair-pounding crowd.

Police headquarters dispatched extra patrolmen to taxi garages, offices and parking lots. The major fleet owners have refused to recognize the committee as the bargaining agent for the drivers.

County Girl Takes Red Cross Course In Small Crafts

A resident of Rosendale, Miss Margaret Geiselmann is attending an American Red Cross National Small Craft School at Dr. Johnson's Camps in Raymond, Maine.

Miss Geiselmann, one of 125 students enrolled at the school will learn the fundamental skills and teaching methods of safety afloat while working toward Red Cross instructor certification in canoeing, boating and sailing. In addition Miss Geiselmann will receive instruction in organizing and planning community small craft programs.

Red Cross has offered National Small Craft Schools for interested persons including camp counselors, recreation workers, and boating enthusiasts throughout the United States annually since 1931.

The purpose of these training centers is to develop leadership in the ever-increasing field of small craft and to make this popular recreational activity more safe. According to the National Safety Council some 1,100 persons were killed and more than 1,160 injured in 3,500 recreational boating accidents in 1963.

Miss Geiselmann, who enrolled for the school through the Ulster County Red Cross Chapter, will use this training at Camp Ocala in Umatilla, Florida. She is also an authorized water safety instructor and taught more than 500 children swimming last year. At present, Miss Geiselmann is a junior at State University College in New Paltz.

Peru, N. Y., Fire Today Does $200,000 Damage

PERU, N.Y. (AP) — A fire swept through the business section of this Clinton County community early today, destroying several buildings and causing damage estimated at more than $200,000.

No one was injured. Two families escaped from the hotel. Firemen, who estimated the damage, said the fire started in the top floor of the three-story frame hotel on Main Street and spread to buildings to the south.

A pharmacy and a dentist's office were gutted. A grocery store and an auctioneer's office above it were heavily damaged by smoke, heat and water, firemen said.

Oilbirds navigate by voicing evenly spaced clicks — sharp, snapping sounds. The birds bounce the clicks off confining walls, gauging clearance by the time it takes the echo to return to their ears.

A garage to the north of the hotel escaped damage. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

DO YOU REMEMBER

By Sophie Miller

In the Friday June 11, 1965 Freeman on page 11 is the announcement of the first day sales of the Robert Fulton Stamps on Aug. 19, at Clermont, New York. The while the Kingston Post office will process all first day covers, and will require some 25 to 35 additional employees for about two weeks for this work, which will be from about Aug. 2, through 20 Only Clermont, New York will sell the Robert Fulton stamp on Aug. 19 I know this all sounds complicated, and as I understand the first time the first day covers were ever processed in Kingston.

Fine Memory Records

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Leo Roman, 80, a plumber for 56 years, has a good memory, not to mention good records.

In 1922, he deposited $25 with the St. Louis County treasurer to guarantee that any excavations he made would be properly filled and that damage to alleys or streets would be repaired.

Now planning to retire, Roman presented his receipt for the deposit and asked for return of the money.

The treasurer's office was checked and the money was still on deposit. It is to be returned.

I hope to take to the Central Post office and leave money for the nickel Fulton stamp to be processed for the stamp and P. O. mark of "First Day Issue" and date.

I have asked Mrs. Ruth Hellard, president of the Stamp-trotters Society of Kingston to write instructions "How to service first day covers" which she kindly did. She writes: "While the Fulton five cent stamp will be postmarked Clermont, N. Y., this is a special cancellation placed in use for this event since the town no longer has its own post office. The actual work will be done by the Kingston postal crew. The cover (or envelope) should be a No. 6 size envelope, either plain or a cachet (decorated or illustrated on the normal position, (in light pencil if you wish to erase it later, after you receive it). Write in the stamp position, 1, 2, 3, or 4 in pencil as to how many stamps you wish, at five cents each.

Inside you can place a post-card type card and either stick in the flap or seal, although First Day Covers are first class mail so the five cents current price prevails. The card filler or insert assures a cleaner cancel. If a block of four stamps is requested (20 cents) be sure and write your address very low and toward the left, so there is room for the stamp. Place these covers or envelopes in a larger envelope with payment for the stamps requested. The Post Office prefers certified checks or money orders in payment, coins and currency are sent at your own risk. If you do send coins, wrap and tape them well on a card-board, or 3 by 5 card. Do not request mint stamps in the same letter with first day covers, as they will be available at the Post Office after Aug. 19 sometime, or can be had from the Philatelic Agency, Post Office Dept. Washington, D. C. 20260.

No doubt because of all these complications first day covers and stamps have a value as time passes. Address the outside envelope to Postmaster, Kingston, New York 12401, and below write First Day, Fulton Stamp. These should be sent early before the day of issue, Aug. The Post Office will not service undressed covers or envelopes by mail, you can use peelable labels if you wish to have the address removed after servicing, or write your return address lightly in pencil, Ruth E. Hellard advised.

I decorated some of the Fulton cachet envelopes with green Shamrocks because Fulton's family came from Kilkenny, Ireland about 1730. Robert was born in Pennsylvania, known as the keystone state, so I use a keystone as another background. Being Robert Fulton was an artist, I have a palette as a background for another. I will be glad to show these Fulton covers to readers who are interested.

BRIDGE

Contrary to popular belief, the expert does not always get the most out of the cards. In fact, there are many occasions when an expert will go out of his way to insure his contract and wind up with fewer tricks than the player who has not heard about safety plays.

The game was rubber bridge and when South looked over the dummy he saw that he could be set if East could gain the lead with a trump and play through the king of diamonds.

South proceeded to guard against this by cashing dummy's king of spades at trick two and then taking a spade finesse at trick three.

West gathered in the trick with his queen and eventually made a second trick with his ace of diamonds.

The ordinary bridge player has learned to try to drop a queen when he holds nine cards in a suit and if this were done he would make 12 tricks instead of 11.

The expert would also have made 12 tricks had he been in a slam contract, but experts have an utter horror of going down when they have a cinch play for the contract and expert South had no regrets about his safety play.

How would expert South have played the hand in a duplicate game?

We don't know for sure. The only thing we do know is that he would have really studied the hand and decided whether or not to take the best percentage play for 12 tricks or to play safe for his contract. Overtricks are most important in duplicate. They mean little in rubber bridge.

Constitutional Amendment

Congress Ready to Act On Presidential Succession

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—Eighteen months after President John F. Kennedy's assassina-

Good Bear in Skopje

SKOPJE, Yugoslavia (AP)—The first monument put up here since this southern Yugoslav city was destroyed by an earthquake is "the good bear from Norway." The statue, a granite bear, was erected in a prefabricated housing development financed by the government and charity organizations of Norway.

tion Congress is ready to act, perhaps this week on what happens when a president dies or is disabled or there is no vice president.

This solution would be in the form of a constitutional amendment which must be approved by two-thirds of the House and four-fifths of the state legislatures. Ratification isn't expected before 1967.

But in a related matter—a proposal to make it a federal crime to kill a president—Congress still hasn't decided. The House passed a bill to do this but not the Senate.

Yet, long ago Congress made it a federal offense to kill Secret Service men, who guard presidents, and to kill U.S. judges, district attorneys and their assistants, U.S. marshals, FBI agents, postal inspectors, prison guards, game wardens and narcotic agents.

Congress 48 years ago made it a federal crime to threaten the life of a president and, in the past decade, to threaten to harm a vice president, a president-elect, or other officers in line of succession to the presidency.

Four presidents have been assassinated but, just because Congress never made such a crime a federal one, Lee Harvey Oswald was taken into custody by Dallas police after he killed Kennedy.

Last Sept. 28 the seven-man commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, after finishing its investigation of Kennedy's slaying, strongly recommended making presidential assassination a federal crime.

Congress, in a hurry to get home in the 1964 election year, quit five days later without taking action. It started all over this year.

On June 21 the House approved a bill making it a federal crime punishable by death to assassinate a president, vice president, or any person legally acting as president. This would also apply to the president-elect and vice president-elect between their election and inauguration.

The bill provides other penalties, up to life imprisonment, for kidnapping assault or conspiracy, involving the life or safety of the same officials and would permit the government to offer rewards up to $100,000 for information of such violations. But the Senate must act before this can become law.

No Vice President
Besides the four assassinated presidents, four others have died in office and 16 times the country has been left without a vice president. The most recent example was when Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson succeeded Kennedy.

Fortunately, each time a president died there was a vice president to take his place and serve out his term although this left the vice presidency vacant. But seven other vice presidents died in office and one resigned.

Thus, the country repeatedly faced the question: "What happens when a president is disabled or when he dies and there is no vice president? Incredible as it may seem, Congress always has ducked tackling this until now in a constitutional amendment.

Briefly this is what it would do: when there is no vice president, the president nominates one but a majority of both houses must approve before he can take office.

When a president knows he is unable to do his job and so notifies Congress in writing, the vice president shall be acting president until the president, again in writing, tells Congress he can resume.

When President Is Disabled

What happens if a president is too disabled to know it or won't admit it? When the vice president and a majority of the Cabinet, or some other body Congress designates later by law, notify Congress in writing that the president is unable to perform his duties, the vice president becomes acting president.

But what happens if then the president writes Congress that he can do his job? He simply resumes his job unless—within four days of his letter to Congress—the vice president and the Cabinet majority disagree and so notify Congress in writing.

Then Congress must meet within 48 hours to resolve the dispute. If, within 21 days two-thirds of both houses decide the president is unable to do his job, the vice president will continue as acting president. Otherwise, the president resumes his duties as chief executive.

1910 KHS Class Holds Reunion; Plans '70 Meet

The 25th anniversary reunion of the Kingston High School class of 1910 was held Saturday night at the Grand Hotel and Country Club in Kerhonkson.

The banquet proceedings opened with the invocation by Frank Simpson. Following a salute to the flag by the class members, Robert Messinger led the group in singing the K.H.S. alma mater.

Mrs. Ruth Saxe Maines, general chairman for the reunion, welcomed the class members and introduced and thanked the committee chairman.

Harold Keator, toastmaster, reviewed the high lights of the class during their senior year at KHS. He also noted that members had come from many miles to attend the reunion. His findings revealed that Commander Robert Schneider had flown in from Texas and George Silkworth had traveled from Utah. He concluded his portion of the program with an entertaining and amusing showing of photo flashbacks of class members then and now.

Class member Michael Guido filmed the affair for the class to be shown at future reunions. The class is weighing the year 1970 as a possible target date for their third reunion.

Following the class program, the members adjourned to the hotel's Golden Tiara Night Club to be entertained by a group featuring Joe E. Ross, better known as Officer Tootie of the Car 54 TV series.

The committee chairmen for the reunion were Mrs. Ruth Saxe Maines, general chairman; Robert Short, treasurer; Mrs. Natalie Winters Carroll, secretary; Mrs. Doris Pine Schoonmaker, dinner-dance; Robert Sachloff, publicity; Fred Supplies and Mrs. Marion Rodell Schaffrick, entertainment; James Howard, program.

Stolen What?

FLINT, Mich. (AP)—Flint police, accustomed to tracking down stolen cars, were slightly shaken recently when the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Co. reported one of its diesel locomotives had been ditched. Officers found it, however, about five miles from the roadhouse where it was taken. A search continued for the illicit engineers.

EIFFEL ADDITION—A new feature has been added to Paris' famed landmark, the Eiffel Tower. The observation platform guard rail is now topped off with in-curving steel spikes to thwart would-be suicide leapers.

MODERN MAIDENS

"Of course you may invite your friends in for lunch. Bring them in."

Eye $50-Million Industry

LOUISVILLE, Ga. (AP)—Hundreds of leases for mineral rights in east-central Georgia have been negotiated by firms seeking kaolin-aluminum silicate—used in manufacturing processes.

A $5-million plant is being built at Wrens. Prospectors claim the search for minerals could result in a $50-million industry.

A Cot Out Back

DETROIT (AP)—Manuel Cauchi is faced with three choices: sleep on the back porch, move to another house or be fired. Cauchi, 40, is a city employee. Recently he learned his house—all but the back porch—is in suburban Grosse Pointe Park. City employees are required to live in Detroit, and the city Civil Service Commission determines where you live by where you sleep.

WOMAN PAYING THE CHECK

Q: I am a woman in my late thirties, unmarried and live in a hotel. I am often invited to dinner at the house of my married friends. I cannot invite them to dinner at my place as I have no facilities for entertaining. I would like to return their invitations by occasionally inviting them to dine with me in a restaurant, but there is always the awkwardness of paying the bill. The men in the party are always embarrassed at having a woman pay the check. Will you please tell me how I can avoid this?

A: The best solution to your problem is to have a credit card. There are numerous companies who will be glad to send you a credit-card on request. This card may be used as identification at any restaurant or establishment that is a member of the credit organization.

All you need do is to sign the check and give it and the card.

Her Recently Engaged Niece

Q: My niece was recently engaged. I would like to know what is expected of an aunt in the way of presents and entertaining.

A: Although not obligatory, close relatives of the engaged girl usually do send her engagement presents. Whether or not you entertain for her is entirely up to you.

The clothes of the bride and groom as well as those of their attendants are described in the Emily Post Institute booklet entitled "Clothes of the Bridal Party." regarding the

10% EXCISE TAX

REDUCTION

Effective June 22 the "temporary" 10% federal excise tax enacted as a wartime emergency measure in 1941 has been eliminated.

This means the consumer should receive immediate 10% Tax Savings on all his jewelry purchases.

HE WILL AT SCHNEIDER'S!

It is not Schneider's intention to even partially raise prices to offset the tax savings. Schneider's feel this would be unfair, detrimental to our business and tend to defeat the purpose of the tax elimination.

All Schneider's merchandise is clearly ticketed. Certain items tagged by the manufacturer indicate the tax extra; all other items marked with a Schneider's ticket includes the tax and the 10% tax will be taken off the original ticket price.

Funeral March Is Played for Drummer

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — A traditional funeral march was planned today for bass drummer Robert Lewis, 65, a boyhood pal of trumpet star Louis Armstrong.

Lewis died last Thursday.

Lewis and Armstrong were inmates of a boys' home when they met.

Lewis, called by Dixieland critics "a fine exuberant drummer," played briefly with Armstrong and later with the Tulane band under Amos Riley.

He was with the Eureka Brass band from 1939 until his retirement last year because of ill health.

Movie Will Open Summer Program In Local Parks

The 1965 regular summer program of the Recreation Department will take shape this week with activities scheduled almost every night in one park or another.

The first movie of the summer season will be shown Tuesday evening at Forsyth Park starting at dusk. The film for the opening of the season is entitled "Visit to a Small Planet" with Jerry Lewis, Joan Blackman and Earl Holliman and involves farce and fantasy with a wealth of satiric thrusts at earthly foibles.

An insatiable curiosity about humans and their ways sends Jerry Lewis, as an impish creature from outer space, spinning from out of the stratosphere to a realistic "grounding" somewhere in Virginia. The film will start at dusk and is about one and a half hours in length. The film will be shown on Wednesday evening in Fairbuck Park.

On Friday evening the usual weekly dance will be held at Forsyth from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m. with music for the dance being provided by The Playboys.

MRS. DAVID PAUL MAHN

Joyce Ann Wiegert, David Paul Mahn Wed

On Saturday, June 26, 1965, at 1:30 p.m., marriage vows were exchanged by Joyce Ann Wiegert of 16 Ora Place, Kingston, and David Paul Mahn of South Weymouth, Mass., in Immanuel Lutheran Church, this city.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Wiegert Sr., of Kingston, was given in marriage by her father.

Mahn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto H. Mahn of 31 Trafalgar Court, South Weymouth, Mass.

The Rev. Carl Goette was the officiating clergyman, assisted by the Rev. Arthur Leslie, cousin of the bridegroom. J. Charles Brand was organist and Norman Leutke, soloist.

The bride wore an Empress Josephine gown of organza over taffeta with accents of lace. The full skirt was chapel length and was enhanced with lace. Her bouffant veil of English illusion was held by an organza pillbox and she carried a cascade of white carnations with a white orchid center.

Linda Wiegert of Kingston was maid of honor for her sister. She wore a floor length sheath of orchid organza over taffeta. A flower cluster of braid with satin and velvet leaves held a short bouffant veil. She carried a cascade of yellow roses.

Mrs. Virginia Lammerding of Basking Ridge, N. J., sister of the bridegroom, Miss Judith Klein of Bethpage, N. Y., and Miss Joyce Lange of Thorndale, Texas, were the attendants. They wore gowns identical to that of the honor attendant and carried cascades of yellow and white daisies.

Deirdre Fitzgerald of Mt. Marion Park, N. Y., the bride's niece, was flower girl in a floor length dress of white silk organza over taffeta. A wreath of pale orchid tulle decorated with pastel buds and leaves was accented with a bow and streamers. She carried a basket of orchid, yellow, white daisies.

Edward B. Mahn of South Weymouth, Mass., was best man for his brother. Ushering were Richard Lammerding, Basking Ridge, N. J., brother-in-law of the bridegroom; C. Terry Wiegert of Troy, N. Y., brother of the bride; and John Hesford, Randolph, Mass.

A reception was given in the Immanuel Lutheran Church hall. Afterwards, the couple left for Cape Cod, Mass.

The bride was graduated from Kingston High School and Concordia College, Bronxville, N. Y., and Concordia Teachers College, River Forest, Ill. She has taught at St. Paul Lutheran School, Thorndale, Texas, and Trinity Lutheran School, Hoytston, Ill. In September, she will teach kindergarten and first grade at Immanuel Lutheran School, Olivette (St. Louis), Mo.

Mr. Mahn is an alumnus of Concordia College, Bronxville, N. Y., Concordia Senior College, Fort Wayne, Ind., and Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, Mo. On September 1st, he will be in one year vicarage (internship) at Immanuel Lutheran Church, Olivette, Mo., before returning for his final year at Concordia Seminary.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahn will be at home at 905 Concordia Lane, Clayton, Mo.

On Missile Frigate

Fireman Arnold A. Smith, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith of High Falls, N. Y., is serving aboard the guided missile frigate USS Harry E. Yarnell, participating in the 1965 Midshipman Cruise in the Caribbean Sea.

In company with other ships and units of the U. S. Atlantic Fleet, the Yarnell is conducting naval operations for the U. S. Naval Academy and Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps Midshipmen. These operations will provide the "Midshipmen" with personal experience and practical knowledge of navigation, communications, seamanship, gunnery, engineering and other basic naval subjects.

Ulster Academy 50th Anniversary Attended by 125

Some 125 graduates and former students of Ulster Academy gathered at the Governor Clinton Hotel Saturday night to join the 1915 class in the celebration of their 50th anniversary. The occasion also marked the 50th year since the old academy closed its doors as one of the city's two high schools. So the older graduates were there to lend their thoughts and voices to the "gone but not forgotten" theme of the evening.

The graduates present ranged from R. Grant Johnston, class of 1896, and his brother, Dr. Frank Johnston, class of 1899, all through the intervening years up to the last class of 1915. Many others, who were present, had attended Ulster Academy for less than four years but long enough to become imbued with the spirit which permeated all students at the school.

The hours prior to the dinner were spent by those gathered for the celebration in renewing acquaintances with classmates and friends whom they had not seen since school days, and in reminiscing over incidents and memories of long ago. Some of those present had traveled hundreds of miles to enjoy the happy hours of remembrance and recollection. Frank DuMont, of the 1915 class, came in from Grand Rapids, Michigan; the Clarence Rowlands were up from Camden, South Carolina, and Joe Gregory arrived from Annapolis, Maryland, just to name a few.

The entire evening was given over to reminiscing, recollection and informality befitting the occasion. During the dinner, and between courses, the group joined in singing old songs of high school days and the school songs, Alma Mater and the Orange and Black. After the dinner there was no set speaking program. The chairman called on several of the persons in the gathering for extemporaneous remarks.

Among those called upon were Joseph Gregory, an Annapolis graduate who is now a Rear Admiral (ret.) U. S. Navy; Eugene B. Carey, a former Mayor of Kingston; Clarence Rowland, a former president of the Kingston Board of Education and a long time member of the Board, who is now an industrialist in Camden, S.C.; former Congressman Jay LeFevre, and former Surgeon John B. Sterley, both of whom are married to Ulster Academy graduates.

The invocation before the dinner was given by Frederic Snyder, noted traveler and lecturer, who also is married to an Ulster Academy graduate.

The final person called upon, and one who has the affection of the group, was Mrs. Mary C. Doremus, the only living former teacher at the school.

One other highlight of the evening was a "telegram" from the Class of 1915 of Kingston Academy expressing good wishes to their contemporaries.

The committee in charge of the affair, all of whom were members of the 1915 Class, were very pleased that so many former students responded and attended. They are also deeply indebted to the P.V.P. Club, an association of Ulster Academy Girls who have maintained an organization through the years, and who were invaluable in supplying names and addresses of graduates and former students.

As a token of recognition to the oldest known living graduate, Mary Over Elmhurst of the Class of 1888, the floral centerpiece from the head table was delivered to her at Orthmann's Sanitarium.

At the conclusion of a happy, nostalgic evening everyone present expressed a desire to be invited to attend the 75th reunion.

After more than 33 years of service with the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp., he retired in February, 1957. Mr. Stall first became associated with the local utility in January, 1918 as an office salesman with the then Kingston Gas and Electric Company, a predecessor of the Central Hudson system.

He has served as assistant to the district and division commercial managers and as public contact supervisor. In March, 1929, he was promoted to chief clerk and just prior to his retirement served as commercial personnel training supervisor from June 1951.

Mr. Stall is a former member of the Kingston Area Chamber of Commerce, member of the Official Board of Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, a past trustee and for many years treasurer of the church. Fraternally, he is a member of Kingston Lodge No. 10, F&AM.

The Stalls have two children, Lois, wife of Thomas W. Miller, 72 Pine Street, and William, who married the former Miss Helen Fitzsimmons, Kingston.

The Millers are celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary. They were married in the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church on June 23, 1940 by the Rev. William R. Peckham.

The William Stalls reside on Lucas Avenue Extension. They have three children, Catherine

Car Hits Rock Wall

While driving his car on Route 213, Town of Marlborough, at 11:15 p.m. last night, Thomas J. Shamrow, 19, RFD, Napanoch, lost control and his 1960 convertible crashed into a rock wall. He was taken to Veterans Memorial Hospital, Ellenville, by Don's Ambulance, Rosendale, and treated for chest and back injuries and lacerations of the right arm, according to a report of Trooper John McMickie, Kingston substation.

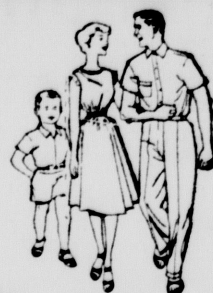

Died a Spinster

In 1850, a Mount Molyoke College graduate, Esther Howland of Worcester, Mass., started to make Valentines and soon took over the American market. Ironically, Miss Howland died a spinster in 1904.

Our Congratulations, Graduates of 1965

Personal Commitment Is Urged In Sahloff's Speech to KHS Grads

Urging the pursuit of mature judgment in a bland age of vague moral standards, Willard H. Sahloff, vice president and general manager of General Electric Company's housewares division delivered the commencement address at Kingston High School's graduation exercises Sunday at Dietz Stadium.

A native of Kingston, Sahloff is a 1926 graduate of KHS and currently lives in Bridgeport, Conn.

In his keynote speech, Sahloff encouraged the graduates to become the kind of people who develop and maintain refined attitudes of personal, public and national responsibility. From this day on he said, "you will rise or fall on the strength of your own self-discipline, judgment, and conscience."

Criticizing the lawyers, teachers, businessmen, public servants and artists in contemporary society who fail to commit themselves to strong principles, Sahloff warned "there is no other safeguard than personal moral responsibility."

Following is the text of Sahloff's speech:

I'm pleased and flattered to be here today, pleased, because it's good to be back home again. Flattered, to be asked to speak to this record-breaking class of 1965. (116 in my class 39 years ago).

Last Word Pleasant

Actually, it seems unfair that your teachers, who have worked so hard to prepare you for this important event, must step aside to permit me to have the last word.

However, I hope this last word is a pleasant one for you. You have my assurance, it's most pleasant for me.

I feel it's best, at the start of any talk, to inform the audience as to the subject I will cover—and today's is very basic—you, each one of you. This already may be your favorite subject, but I want you to know that today, it's mine.

I also think in some cases, it's best to tell the audience just what you are not going to talk about. So I'm serving fair warning I am not planning to despair or you, the so-called younger generation.

I'll wager that on many commencement platforms, some pompous, although well-meaning speaker, is pointing his finger at the graduating class and denouncing today's youth. This is nothing new. Some 2500 years ago a Sumerian inscribed on a stone tablet, "The world is coming to an end. The young no longer obey their parents. The world is coming to an end."

Prophets of Doom

Some thousands of years later, modern philosopher Harold Taylor wrote, and I quote—"In the United States, when everything else fails, the custom is to blame education and its product, modern youth. Since the person who blames education can never be proved wrong, and since we can always count on a succession of young men and women, each of them doing something to outrage the moral sense of a preceding generation, this gives us an endless supply of moral indignation to be generated and distributed throughout the social system." End of quote.

The denunciation of the young," says Logan Piers Smith, "is a necessary part of older people's hygiene. It greatly assists in the circulation of the blood."

I do not count myself among either the prophets of doom, or the denigrators of young people. When Biblical prophets attacked the vested institutions and the injustices of their age, they did so, not in hope the world would be destroyed, but that their challenge, issued in the name of God, would lead to a re-examination of the standards of man and society.

And, that's all I propose to do here today. Talk about standards, talk about you, your responsibilities, and my hopes for your future.

Worn-Out Cliches

If only for the disciplines involved, I wish this entire class was going on to some form of higher education. I know, however, this is neither possible nor practical for all of you.

To those of you who will not have this opportunity, there certainly is no cause for dejection. Like most clichés, the currently popular one that "you can't get anywhere today without a college degree," is simply not true. I stress this because today's utilitarian society readily seeks to place a market price on a college degree. It will offer sta-ties to demonstrate that one with a Master's degree in Science commands a higher salary than one with a Bachelor of Science degree because he has more to communicate, more knowledge, or more skill. A degree, however, cannot be equated with education, and salary is not the measure of wisdom nor even a satisfactory test of knowledge. The test of your education is much more intangible and I intentionally oversimplify it, by suggesting that the real test, at any level, is the continuing growth of reasoning power, or if you will, your increasing ability to exercise sound judgment.

Grayson Kirk, president of Columbia University, said, "We live in a time, not to try men's souls, but to try men's judgments. We must understand that the future of this country will be determined more by the wisdom and discipline of its citizens than by the vast physical power at their disposal."—end of quote.

This reasoning power, or judgment, is a subtle and disciplined process, the characteristic of a leader of men. Amid all our demand for man-made and mass-distributed freedom, the educated person already has set himself free, because he can reason, and no one can prevent him from doing something that he is not helplessly imprisoned, like the victim of prejudice, or the victim of ignorance.

It's as simple as that. The test of your education is your ability to use good judgment. Many of you now possess this attribute in abundance. More of you still need a formalization of your education to sharpen this faculty. All of you will be constantly tested, and the extent to which you pass, fail, or just squeak through, determines your future, a future already started.

From this day on, you'll have the exciting experience of becoming full fledged citizens in a free society. High-sounding words, carrying with them some equally high-sounding responsibilities.

From this day on, you'll shoulder personal, public and national responsibilities.

From this day on, the disciplines and restraints meted out by parents and teachers alike will lessen, and you will rise or fall on the strength of your own self-discipline, judgment, and conscience.

Responsibilities Noted

Let me point out some of the responsibilities you face. If you recall, I said they were personal, public and national.

Personal—for yourself, your family and your future family. In the Shakespearean sense, "To thine own self be true." This is the philosophy that marks the mature man or woman; your ability to exercise moral judgment; to hold fast to what is right, and to maintain integrity under the conflicting pressures of everyday life; this is your personal responsibility.

This is no less heavy a burden for those of you who go on to college where you will have the added responsibility of being worthy of the time, effort, and money which is needed for your educational well-being and provided by parents and teachers alike, just be certain that four years from today when you reach out to accept that degree, that you have faithfully and honestly discharged these added responsibilities and have fully achieved the benefits of four additional years of education. If, however, you have just squeezed through, squandering your time during these four years; if you feel the world then owes you a living; if indeed, you have not progressed further than you are this Sunday afternoon in Kingston on June 27, you will deserve the future that surely one day will be on your doorstep.

When I speak of public responsibility, I speak of you as an intelligent resident of any community. I speak of the person who stands up to be counted. I speak of the person who lets people know what he thinks and gets directly involved in any issue. I don't speak of the apathetic, go-along-with anything type. At the time of the American Revolution, John Adams said that no more than a third of the colonists really wanted independence and probably even less cared to make the exertion independence demanded. A third were loyal to the king and the rest were inert and uncommitted. If that statement is true, we're all lucky we're here today.

Common Sense

I'm sure you all read with shame the story of the New York City families who heard cries in the night for help from a young girl who was being murdered under their very windows. They thought it best not to get "personally involved," or even make a telephone call to the police! You've read where a medal was recently given to a citizen of New York City for helping a policeman, who single-handedly, was facing an uncontrollable mob. This medal was given for something we should take for granted as normal behavior, helping a fellow man at a time of great need. Today, it's so unusual, medals are passed out for doing what should come instinctively.

So, stand up and be counted. In the Roman Senate House of the Forum, when a vote was taken, all those in favor rose from their seats and walked to the center of the floor and were counted, one by one. The same procedure was undertaken for those opposed. There were no abstentions. None sat on the fence. Everyone knew, literally and figuratively, exactly where everyone else stood. Don't be a "well-rounded" person who can be pushed in any direction, because you roll easily.

And, finally your national responsibility. What quality of life do you want, not simply as consumers and producers, but as citizens of this great republic? What sort of image do you want to project to a world of which we are admittedly leaders? Is it the face of the individual or the family as a high consumption unit, with minimal social links and responsibilities; the picture of father happily drinking his favorite beer; mother fondling soft garments, newly rinsed in a miracle detergent; children gaily calling from the breakfast table for more of the cereal with the hole in it, or without a hole in it? With the supermarket as our temple, and the singing commercial as our litany, we're hardly likely to fire the world with an irresistible vision of America's exalted purposes. I say education and the arts are a starting point. For, it's here that the citizens of tomorrow can learn to demand and live a fuller life.

The society that technology is building, demands a grasp and competence among the mass citizens, undrained in earlier civilizations. Today, the man on the street talks about outer space and computers, as readily as he does about "what happened to the Mets last night shouldn't happen to a dog." He's surrounded by it. Whether you like it or not, new standards of respect for technologies, which in the past, were left to the Buck Rogers comic strips, are being thrust upon us. Therefore, why shouldn't we take the lead? Do something more than watch television for five hours a night. Learn more about what is happening in the arts and sciences and make a judgment.

Commitment Needed

One well-known dissenter, who shall remain nameless, recently said about Government taxes, "No wonder a newborn baby cries—it's hungry, naked, and already owes the Government seventeen hundred dollars." Learn more about what is happening around you and then, if you don't like it, do something about it! Avoid the sorry examples you see about you.

The "quick-buck" artists and hypocrites, that may be found in business, in the Book of Job, it is written, "The joy of a hypocrite, is but for a moment." Yet, we see its lure working on some of us every day, in every way.

The young man entering the medical profession, like the witch doctor, tempted to trade on the mysteries of his profession; to gouge his patients financially; or violate his confidential relationships.

The secretary who does just what she is supposed to do and no more.

The lawyer prostituting his profession for the sake of gain.

The civil servant who, lulled by a false sense of security, works only for the present and disregards the future.

The young minister, facing the great gulf between his sophisticated theology, and the popular beliefs of his congregation, finding himself living a lie for the sake of keeping peace in the pews.

The hourly worker, who fails to resist the temptation for featherbedding and shoddy workmanship.

The school teacher succumbing to the temptation of laziness.

The farmer, who must decide whether to be a food-and-fiber farmer, or a government-check farmer.

The college professor, whose thrilling assignment is to open up minds for a lifetime of learning, instead, closes them forever, by preaching his particular prejudices.

The housewife, badgered by the endless demands of children and housekeeping, succumbing to the temptation to let her family standards go slack.

The scientist, or the engineer, facing the temptation to be second-rate, even while he wrestles with the terrible question of designing weapons for mass extermination.

The artist, in a time of vague standards, who panders either to vulgar or esoteric tastes.

The nurse, who is more interested in wages and vacations than the great services she is performing for the sick and helpless.

And, our public officials in the government, who seek to become our masters, rather than our servants.

Whatever you do in life, your integrity will be at risk. To some, this may seem to mark us as God's victims, rather than His children. Perhaps, however, this shows His wisdom and our foolishness. For it's this endless uncertainty and difficulty which gives life its seriousness, its depth, its quality. Without risks, life would be bland and meaningless.

And, in the end, there is no other safeguard than personal moral responsibility.

These days, it's not fashionable to speak of moral responsibility. That's too simple for a sophisticated age. Instead, we seek the causes of ethical, and moral failures, in other, less personal, factors. We say it's the environment, or the slums, or the endocrine glands, or the libido, or the organization, or the socialists, or the reds, or the paternalistic government, or the power elite. These are all modern evils and we like to put the blame on them. But, after all of us have hunted high and low for the culprit, we see a strangely familiar face in the mirror and realize there's only one solution to the problem of good and evil: individual moral responsibility. Your life is what you make it.

In closing, let me express the hopes which go with you. The hopes of myself, your parents, and your teachers. We hope above all —that your first step in education, has been a builder of basic character;

—that it has molded you for your future roles, as custodians of the Republic;

—that it has taught you to be strong enough to know when you are weak, and brave enough to face yourself, when you are afraid;

—that it has taught you to be proud and unbending in honest failure, but humble and gentle in success;

—that it has taught you how to laugh, but never forget how to weep;

—that it has taught you to reach into the future, but never to neglect the past;

—that it has taught you to be serious, but never to take yourself too seriously;

—that it has taught you to be humble, so you may enjoy the simplicity of greatness;

—that it has created in you a sense of wonder, a joy, and an inspiration of life.

May God shower his blessings upon you.

Hoover Cited By Board at Commencement

DR. W. WENDELL HOOVER

Dr. W. Wendell Hoover, Superintendent of the Kingston City Schools, Consolidated, was honored by the Kingston School Board Sunday at the high school commencement ceremonies.

A citation was presented to him by Dr. David Kline, president of the Kingston School Board, in recognition of his services as a chief school administrator on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the American Association of School Administrators.

The AASA, a professional organization made up of 17,000 school administrators, was founded in 1865 at Harrisburg, Pa. This was preceded by several organizational meetings in New York State.

All of the chief school administrators in New York State were honored through the presentation of a citation to Dr. Franklin S. Barry, superintendent of schools in Syracuse, on June 11 by Edward S. Foster, president of the New York State School Boards Association at a meeting of the Association's Board of Directors in Cooperstown, Dr. Barry represented the State's chief school administrators because of his position as chairman of the AASA Centennial Celebration Committee for New York State.

Guards Muffle 3 Trying Jail Break With Bomb, Guns

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Three prisoners armed with home-made pistols and a bomb seized two guards and briefly took over the second floor of the hospital at Western State Penitentiary Sunday night.

A squad of guards crushed the rebellion with tear gas. The hostages were freed unharmed.

The bomb, fashioned from crushed match heads jammed into a piece of pipe, blew up in the rush on the prisoners' stronghold.

It shattered the hand of inmate Richard Mayberry, 27, a convicted robber doing extra time for leading a sensational attempted prison break and riot in Philadelphia two years ago.

He was the only person hurt in the rebellion which involved only three of the prison's 950 inmates. Other prisoners banged on their bars and yelled but authorities said it was unrelated "horseplay."

Warden James Maroney said he didn't know what caused the rebellion.

"They had demands. They wanted to make a deal. I refuse to make deals at anytime. Therefore I didn't listen and I don't know what the deal was about," he said.

The warden said the rebellion started at 7 o'clock shortly after supper when the prisoners hustled two guards onto the second floor of the hospital building.

From there they fired on guards in two nearby cellblocks. The guards returned the fire, forcing two of the prisoners to retreat into a washroom, the third into a 15-bed ward.

Scores of city and county police, state troopers and off-duty guards ringed the 40-foot walls of the prison, which is located about two miles south of Pittsburgh's downtown section on the north bank of the Ohio River.

Maroney, called from his home, organized the tear gas assault. The three prisoners came out with their hands up and surrendered without a struggle.

Maroney said the two guards, Sgt. John R. Waltz, 57, and Joseph Ferrara, 38, were not abused during the 90-minute rebellion. He said, however, that "the prisoners threatened to kill them."

The other two inmates involved were Dominick Codispoti, 35, doing a 2½ to 10-year term for robbery in Philadelphia, and Herbert F. Langes, 25, who was doing 5 to 10 years for robbery with violence in Lancaster County, Pa.

TOASTED THINS AND CHEESE—A new product may be seen now on the grocery shelves in this area. It is "toasted thins," a new snack item currently being introduced by a leading bakery. Toasted thins are available in six delicious flavors: cheese, white, onion, rye, Hovis and wheat. These unique miniature toasted bread slices can be used for in-between-meal snacks, for the youngsters home after a swim, or for your party dips and spreads.

Cyclist Is 18th Dutchess Fatal; Dies Instantly

Dutchess County recorded its 18th highway fatality of 1965 today, when the body of a motorcyclist was found in the woods off Route 9 near the intersection of Old Hopewell Road, Town of Wappinger.

Fishkill State Police said Thomas Briggs, 29, of 77 Van Wagner Road, Town of Poughkeepsie, apparently was instantly killed. Briggs would have been 30 on Tuesday.

Dr. Chester H. Golding, Wappinger Falls, Dutchess county medical examiner, theorized the death occurred at about 2 p. m., although the exact time of the fatality was not determined.

According to an investigation by Trooper John DeMadler, Briggs apparently was driving north on Route 9 when for some reason the motorcycle left the pavement and Briggs' face hit a warning sign post, splitting open his head.

After 7 a. m. today, a passerby saw the motorcycle in the woods and notified troopers. Trooper DeMadler went to the scene and found Briggs' body 72 feet off the highway.

BCI investigators from the Fishkill substation and Dr. Golding are continuing their investigation.

Tresh and Linz, Yankee Players Here for Game

By Charles J. Tiano
(Freeman Sports Editor)

Not even two major league ball players, a Page One Queen and assorted celebrities could save the Kingston Braves in their 1965 debut Saturday night at Dietz Stadium.

Phil Linz, the harmonica virtuoso and Tom Tresh, guitarist (subbing for Joe Pepitone) rushed to take part in the pre-game ceremonies.

Miss Pamela Downey, the 1965 Page One Queen, decorated the Dietz scene with beauty and class.

But the Waterbury All Stars walked off with the ball game, 4 to 3, in 10 innings after Fred Davis' new edition had rallied valiantly with two runs in the bottom of the ninth to tie the regulation contest, 3-3.

Musical Duet
The two Yankees—Tresh and Linz—displayed charm, poise and a measure of musical skill as they regaled the surprisingly large crowd of more than 500 with an un-copyrighted version of "Swanee." Then they signed a bundle of autographs and hustled back to the more urban atmosphere of New York City and a good night's sleep before Sunday's combat with Los Angeles.

Dick McCarthy, who was unusually nimble with bon mots around the stadium, also introduced Patrolman Dick Scherer, who gave a stirring rendition of the national anthem; Mayor John J. Schwenk, Addison Jones, and the smiling Davi (sans cravat).

Waterbury scored the clincher in the top of the 10th when Les Velas walked, worked his way to third and rode home on a long sacrifice fly by Frank Margillo.

Two Runs in Ninth
Kingston's ninth inning heroics consisted of Glenn Santmire's leadoff single, a walk to Gerry Hawkins and Pat Meyer's single scoring Santmire. Hawkins went to third on the throwin and then scored on the payoff end of a double steal with Myers.

One bright spot in the Kingston performance was the superb pitching of 17-year-old Brian Bach, who yielded only three hits and fanned 12 in eight innings. All three Waterbury runs were unearned.

Bob Sinkewicz, a bony right-hander, limited the Braves to 5 hits and whiffed 14. Lonny McAndrew pitched two hitless innings in relief for Kingston but yielded the winning run.

The date of the next Braves' contest was not announced.

Texans Capture Watkins Race

WATKINS GLEN, N. Y. (AP) — Texans Jim Hall and Hap Sharp, racing partners who build rear-engined sports cars, stick close together in competition.

The 27-year-old Hall streaked across the finish line first Sunday in the Watkins Glen Sports Car Grand Prix.

Two-tenths of a second behind him was Sharp, who earned second place and $1,500 prize money.

Hall, who covered the 87-lap, 200.1-mile event in 2:01.3, cashed in for $2,500 and boosted his United States road racing championship points to 37. He is in second place behind George Follmer, of Pasadena, Calif., who finished here fourth overall and first in his class, and leads with 42 points.

Hall and Sharp, 37, are from Midland, Tex., where they build Chaparral rear-engine sports cars that Hall has designed.

Only 17 of the 30 drivers who started finished the event. Hall and Sharp, in Chaparral II's, pulled away from the pack early in the race on the 2.1-mile track, and hit speeds of 160 miles per hour on straightaway stretches.

Hall averaged 99.11 miles per hour in the $12,200 event.

Thirty-fifth Race

Guerrillas Down

to convoys traveling to the home region 290 miles north of Saigon and unsuitable flying conditions for helicopters.

Only one road — a muddy, winding trail — connects Tuomoang with the nearest center of government strength, Kontum, 30 miles to the south.

The Viet Cong also was believed regrouping for another attack on Duc Hoa, 20 miles west of Saigon. The Communists overran that village Saturday. But the retreating government troops counterattacked and the Viet Cong withdrew.

In other ground action:

Two U.S. Army advisers were reported wounded, one Vietnamese soldier killed and two wounded in an attack on the other government defenders wounded in an attack on the Nghia Hanh district headquarters 40 miles south of Da Nang.

Viet Cong losses were not known, but U.S. spokesmen said a number of enemy dead were seen from the air.

Within 90 minutes after the initial attack, two U.S. Air Force B-57s from Da Nang pounded the guerrilla positions with bombs and rockets and sent the enemy fleeing into the jungles, the spokesmen said.

30 Minute Barrage

The Viet Cong fired mortar barrages for 30 minutes on an air field and district headquarters at Nha Trang, a China Sea resort town 200 miles northeast of Saigon. Six Vietnamese soldiers were wounded, a Vietnamese helicopter was destroyed or heavily damaged and a U.S. Air Force C-123 transport was damaged, spokesmen said. No U.S. casualties were reported.

South Vietnamese troops with U.S. air support killed seven Viet Cong provincial and local officials in a helicopter-borne raid on the Mekong Delta village of Tan Hiep 35 miles south of Saigon.

U.S. informants called it the biggest since the Viet Cong officials in the war. They said 24 other Viet Cong were slain and 29 were taken prisoner. South Vietnamese officials estimated that the Viet Cong carried off another 50 dead. A Viet Cong hospital also was reported destroyed.

Chief Included

The dead Viet Cong officials included the provincial chief, the American informants said.

They said the Vietnamese 7th Division ordered the raid after receiving intelligence reports of the meeting.

In the air war Sunday 68 U.S. warplanes struck at ammunition dumps, bridges, highways and military compounds within North Viet Nam, a spokesman Deputy Chairman Huynh Tan said.

Deputy Chairman Huynh Tan said the Viet Cong Central Committee was quoted in the current issue of Life magazine as saying the Communists "intend to step up terrorism and to continue it until every single American is out of the country. No American in Saigon is safe."

Phat also was reported as saying that the Viet Cong "is through with hit and run. Now we will attack in force to wipe out whole enemy units. These attacks will work well in the monsoon."

Interviewed

Phat was interviewed by Akihiko Okamura, a Japanese photographer who was held prisoner for 53 days by the Viet Cong. He was sent into Communist territory by life.

Okamura said Phat accurately predicted last Friday's terrorist bombing of a Saigon restaurant in which 23 died.

The Saigon police claimed they had cracked a Viet Cong propaganda cell operating in downtown Saigon. Police sources said a 21-year-old high school student was arrested and implicated 24 others who were being questioned.

On the political front, the Viet Cong joined Peking and Hanoi in rejecting the British Commonwealth peace mission, saying it was "rigged up by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and is aimed at peddling the 'peaceful negotiation' swindle of U.S. President Johnson."

Plans Other Moves

The mission, which has permission to visit only Saigon and Washington, issued a communique saying it planned other moves to initiate peace talks. The mission is composed of Wilson, President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana, Prime Minister Eric Williams of Trinidad and Tobago and Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, prime minister of Nigeria.

Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri of India renewed his proposal for another pause in U.S. raids on North Viet Nam in a taped radio-television interview broadcast from Washington.

The United States halted such bombings from May 12 to 18 without reaction from the Communists.

In Washington, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, the Republican Senate leader, warned against establishing a South Vietnamese coalition government that would include Communists.

The South Korean government announced in Seoul that the Saigon government has asked it to send a combat division to South Viet Nam. The Seoul government reportedly was planning to send about 15,000 troops.

Socialist Democrats Gain

SAARBRUECKEN, Germany (AP) — The Social Democrats gained on Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's Christian Democrats in the final ballot test before the Sept. 19 nationwide election.

The Christian Democrats won the Saarland State election Sunday, getting 42.7 per cent of the 594,893 votes cast. This represented again from 19 to 23 seats in the 50-member legisla-

Ban Imposed On Water Use In Village Area

NEW PALTZ — The New Palitz Village Board this week imposed a ban on the use of the village water, according to information released recently following a special emergency meeting of all members of the Board of Trustees.

In making the announcement, members of the board explained that the restrictions which the New York City Water Commission has imposed on the water users in New York City, since the Village of New Palitz is using water from the aqueduct coming from Ashokan Reservoir.

It was further explained that the village reservoir water supply is depleted, except for a small amount reserved for emergency uses.

The following restrictions on water usage will be in effect immediately, until further notice:

No use of outside hose connections whatsoever, including sprinkling of lawns and shrubs, flushing of porches and sidewalks, car washing and filling of swimming pools.

No commercial washing of cars by service stations and other places of business.

No use of air conditioners where water is not recirculated. All leaky faucets and toilets must be repaired.

Restaurants shall not serve water to customers unless requested.

Board members expressed regret that these additional restrictions had to be imposed, but they emphasized the emergency nature of the situation. They strongly urged all water users to cooperate until the water shortage is relieved.

Bus Purchase Is Approved at School Meeting

At the recent meeting of the New Palitz School Board, members approved the purchase of two 12-passenger buses. The vehicles are to be purchased under a state contract and will cost $6,917.40.

Delivery is expected in time for the 1965-66 school year. There is money currently in the budget for this purchase.

On a recommendation by supervising principal, Frederick Dippe, approval was given to employ a full time French teacher. The French I and III enrollment for next year exceeds 30 students in each class and it was deemed advisable to form new sections. It was found that Campus School French students coming into the tenth grade will have to be kept in separate classes for the language course because of differences in the French program as taught in the Campus School.

Mrs. Laura Dyer was hired as clerk-typist in the nurse's office effective Aug. 1. It was decided that Mrs. Dyer be given first aid instructions.

Approval was also given for the permanent promotion of Mrs. Geraldine Farrell from stenographer to senior stenographer.

Accept Bond Bids

The board accepted the bids of $246.60 and $387 for the tax collector's bond and the treasurer's bond, submitted by the Elting Agency.

The board also voted to purchase a $10,000 employment dishonesty policy, which had been recommended by the school insurance consultant. Even though there has not been a case of employee dishonesty, the growth of the school staff warranted this change.

Arthur Hasbrouck, attendance officer, who will reach the retirement age of 70 on April 1, 1966, requested that he be able to finish the 1966 season. The board received permission from the Retirement System to grant the extension.

Approval was given to business manager, Frank Hamilton to attend the institute for clerks of boards of education at Syracuse University from Aug. 8 to 11.

Investigation Underway

It was reported that during the night of June 17, the school garage was entered and a 4 HP Briggs and Stratton engine was

Registration for the program will be on the upper playground, baseball and playground participants alike. The program will cover all the weekdays, Monday through Friday, from 9 a. m. to 12 noon and 1 p. m. to 4 p. m.

It is asked that all children be picked up promptly between 11:30 and 11:55 in the mornings and 3:30 and 3:55 in the afternoons. There will be no playground supervision between 12 and 1 p. m.

The program is concerned only with children age four and up. They must provide name, address, father or mother's name (first) and a telephone number where the parent may be reached. They must be able to locate the parent at any time if necessary. Announcements concerning the playground activities will be published each week. Anyone needing information may call Madeline Rooney.

Teamsters Back To Normal After Strike in Philly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — All truck traffic was normal again today as teamsters, back from strike, delivered tons of food to an unauthorized week-long strike, delivered tons of food to an unauthorized week-long strike.

About 13,000 members of Teamsters Local 107 manned trucks and freight platforms to move mountains of piled-up goods to factories and retail stores.

Supermarkets and small grocery stores, their supplies exchanged because of the teamster "holiday," had replenished their shelves.

The Teamsters approved over the weekend a back-to-work order by Michael Hession, secretary-treasurer of the local, thus ending the six-day wildcat strike.

One terminal will remain closed, however, for the time being: Roadway Express, Inc., where the trouble began with the firing of four employees June 11 in a cargo handling dispute. Local 107 walked off the job in sympathy with roadway express workers.

Scholarship for Nurses

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has paid a return visit to Cooley Dickinson Hospital where he spent three weeks last year after suffering a broken back in a plane crash June 19.

This time the senator presented a scholarship fund Sunday to the school of nursing. It was announced that the fund is a memorial to Edward S. Moss, a Kennedy aide from Andover who was killed in the crash.

Abraham Lincoln was postmaster of New Salem, Ill., from 1833 to 1836.

ever, if anyone has been registered in the towns and has failed to vote within the four-year period, their name has been removed from the registration books, according to law, if they have not applied to continue their registration. Also, if you have changed residence you must register in your new district.

For information as to a person's status as a qualified registered voter, contact the Board of Elections.

Absentee Ballots

Absentee registration is also available now for persons who are permanently ill or physically disabled or for those persons who are continuously employed outside the state of New York. All forms for absentee registration will be distributed by the Board of Elections only upon the request of the applicant or a member of his immediate family. At the same time these people may apply for an absentee ballot.

Absentee ballot application forms are available now to those qualified voters who apply personally or by mail at the Board of Elections who expect to be absent from Ulster County on Election Day for reasons of business, duty, occupation or vacation.

It is pointed out particularly by the Board of Elections that those students who are home during summer months and who will be qualified to vote in November should come to the office and register. At the same time, they may apply for an absentee ballot.

If there are any questions regarding registration or voting, call or come to the office of the Ulster County Board of Elections, which is now located in the new County Office Building and ask for the Board of Elections.

Works, that the Recreation Department be relieved of the responsibility for park maintenance and that such function be transferred to the Department of Public Works. I believe that this shifting of responsibility will result in better park maintenance and will give the Recreation Department more time to devote to the development and supervision of programs of recreation for our children and young people.

"One of the most frustrating aspects of our city's park and recreation efforts is the alarming extent to which vandalism is occurring in our parks and playgrounds. Buildings have been burned, playground equipment destroyed, and other facilities defaced and ruined. It is a shameful and disgraceful condition and most discouraging to find that those whom we are seeking to serve are destroying the tools we are providing for their use and enjoyment."

"This problem cannot be solved by government alone. It needs and deserves the cooperation of parents, school authorities, citizens who might be witnesses to this destruction of city property and adequate punishment for the guilty."

Respectfully yours,
JOHN J. SCHWENK,
Mayor.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING...

Look for Growth Where Earnings Gain

Q "I have recently inherited an unexpected $8,000 and wish to invest in good growth stocks. I had in mind to buy $4,000 of Pacific Tel. & Tel. shares, which seem depressed due to some litigation with the Public Utility Commission about rates. For the other $4,000 I had in mind something speculative, but with possible growth, such as MacDonald (E. F. & Co. Would you please comment?"

A Please allow me to congratulate you on your unexpected inheritance. Pacific Tel. & Tel. was ordered to cut rates by over $400,000 by the Public Utility Commission, and this rate cut in April was sustained by the California Supreme Court. The June rights offering will bring a 9.6 per cent dilution of earnings and I believe the shares have lost their appeal for the time being. Why not try the big one—American Tel. & Tel., for greater growth and stability.

MacDonald had a "big down" break in earnings in fiscal 1963 and 1964, and some recovery in the first quarter this year. I consider the shares speculative, with future growth difficult to appraise. I suggest, instead, American Hospital Supply.

OLD U.S. PLANE LARGER THAN RUSSIAN GIANT—The USSR's huge Antonov 22 transport plane, recently demonstrated at the Paris air show, was hailed as the world's largest. But, if wingspan only is considered, the U.S. Air Force flew a larger one 'way back in 1947. It was the six-engine, double-decked XC-99, above. Its wingspan was 230 feet against the 210-foot span of the AN-22. Today the XC-99 is obsolete, but it made 126 flights during three years of service, carrying up to 50 cargo tons or 400 fully equipped troops. Russians say their four-engined giant can carry 80 cargo tons or 720 passengers.

UN, ON ITS 20TH BIRTHDAY—Few black areas on Newsmap above show by dramatic contrast the growth of the United Nations during its 20 years of existence. On June 26, 1945, 50 nations signed a charter—the UN's "birth certificate"—in San Francisco. Today, encompassing most of the world's land mass and population, UN nations number 114. Most important exceptions are Red China and Indonesia, largest and most populous of the non-member nations.

Campus Discontent Must Be Guided: Harvard Prof

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Much of the student unrest and discontent sweeping college campuses is an encouraging phenomenon, but it must be guided and controlled by the faculties, a Harvard professor said today.

Dr. Dana L. Farnsworth, director of Harvard University's health services, said "impatience with injustice" is an attribute which we should try to develop and encourage in our students. But such impatience should not be so impulsive as to be destructive of individuals or ideas.

Farnsworth, in an address prepared for the annual convention of the National Education Association, said student rebellion can be channeled into constructive lines if the college administration and faculty treat students with scrupulous fairness and consistency and listen to their complaints, no matter how trivial.

Another speaker, President E. K. Fretwell of the Association for Higher Education, suggested that student leaders be given a greater role in helping to run the colleges and universities.

They have proven their ability in the Peace Corps, the civil rights movement and other organized causes, Fretwell said in a prepared address.

"Why not tap some of this energy, this dedication, this young-man-and-woman power to do the most important collegiate thing of all: organizing and fostering process?" he asked.

Fretwell, dean for academic development of the City University of New York, said, "In the matter of judgment, sometimes in terms of practical idealism and just good sense, student groups have shown themselves considerably ahead of adults."

Needs More Concern
Farnsworth noted that the older generation has always found much to criticize in youth, but he said "the present situation probably calls for even more concern than usual."

He made these points:
"For the most part, our present-day students have never had to contend with the implacable conditions generated by extreme poverty, drought, plagues or economic depression. Millions of our young people are growing up under conditions in which they see little hope or meaning to their future."

"Our young people have heard much more discussion of their rights than of their responsibilities."

Must Have Chance
"Many students think of a college degree as a means of increasing their earning power or as a means of access to professional schools."

Even so, Farnsworth said, "the young are basically idealistic if given a reasonable opportunity."

THE NEA's 103rd annual convention opened Sunday with an announcement that a million-dollar fund drive will be launched to help Negro teachers in the South who have lost their jobs because of school desegregation.

Real Fine Weekend, But Mercury at 48

It may have been a real summertime weekend—sunshine and breezes—but, believe it or not, the city recorded its record low thermometer reading for the date.

The city engineer's office reported a reading of 48 degrees at 4:30 Saturday morning, shattering the previous low of 54 degrees for the date.

While no similar record was set for the high, Old Merc' reached a weekend high of 85 degrees Sunday.

Weather Outlook Through Saturday

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Extended forecasts for Upstate New York, prepared by the U.S. Weather Bureau, from Tuesday through Saturday.

Hot and humid at the beginning of the week, but turning cooler and more comfortable by Wednesday. Warming again by the weekend.

Daytime highs in the middle 80s to low 90s at the beginning will return to more normal levels middle of the week and range from the upper 70s to the middle 80s.

Night time lows in the 60s and low 70s through Tuesday might then considerably lower for a day or two and generally in the 50s.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms through Wednesday. Possibly again by the weekend. Amounts of one half inch or more are likely in some storm areas.

Notes Red Stimulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says competition between the Soviet Union and Red China has stimulated Communist activities throughout Africa.

The Massachusetts Democrat, chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on refugees and escapees, said the two Communist countries are primarily competing for the loyalty of African students and exile leaders.

The Kennedy report came after closed session testimony by G. Mennen Williams, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, and Abba P. Schwartz, administrator of the Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs.

CONGRATULATES CONGRESSMAN—Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall (r) congratulating Congressman Joseph Y. Resnick on the selection of three sites in the 28th District as Registered National Historic Landmarks. The three sites are: The Frederick Church Home, "Olana", near Hudson; The Thomas Cole House on Spring St., Catskill; and The Mount Lebanon Shaker Society at Mount Lebanon in Columbia County. Rep. Resnick pointed out that the selection of the three sites for national recognition is highly significant for the Hudson Valley in that only 33 such sites were selected across the country. In this photo, Secretary Udall and Rep. Resnick discuss plans for the presentation of plaques and certificates of designation which will be held at each of the landmark sites. The photo was taken at Secretary Udall's office.
